JOHNNY EVERS ARRIVES IN BOSTON

RIDER'S PAINTINGS IN COURT

Ethel MacDonald of No. 202 Chestnut street, Waltham, an assistant employed by Henry Orne Rider, the Auburndale photographer, who is charged with having and distributing obscene pictures, testified today under cross-examination that Rider took photographs of nude girls, made sketches from them, and from these sketches made paintings.

"You wouldn't recognize the pictures when he got through," she declared.

She gave further details of Rider's methods. William A. Graham, father of Helen Z. Graham, who has testified she posed in the nude, was a witness. Another witness told how former Mayor Patrick J. Duane of Waltham said to Rider: "If this (a nude picture of the Graham girl) were a picture of my daughter, I'd knock your head off."

Rider began his defence about noon, and ten women were sworn as witnesses for him.

IDENTIFIES PICTURES.

Miss MacDonald resumed the stand when court opened today, and Joseph G. Murphy, representing Rider, continued his cross-examination of her.

She was shown three pictures—one a photograph of a nude girl, one a painting, and the other a sketch.

Q.—Did you ever see these before?
A.—Yes.

Q.—Were the sketch and painting drawn from the picture? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Rider do it? A.—He said he did.

She was shown a sketch of a girl, partially draped.

Q.—Did Rider paint this sketch from a photograph, adding the drapery? A.—I believe he did.

She explained Rider's method of work. "Mr. Rider first photographed the figure, took a print from the negative, and then made a charcoal or pencil drawing. Sometimes he made

DEMOCRATS DESERT WILSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—It will be extremely difficult to procure the repeal of the Panama Canal tolls exemption for coastwise shipping, Majority Leader Underwood today told President Wilson. Many leading Democrats say the President's fight will be a losing one.

Not only is Underwood opposed to the repeal himself, but he told the President that most of the Democrats who voted for the exemption last year are inclined to stand by their guns. He indicated that the country at large supports the attitude of Congress as expressed at the last session, according to the belief prevailing in the House at the present, and that an attempt to secure the repeal at this time would result in disaster.

$60,000 BASEBALL STAR HERE

By A. H. G. MITCHELL.

Johnny Evers—the Boston Braves' $60,000 second baseman—arrived in Boston this afternoon.

Evers landed here at 2:35 on his first visit to his future baseball home since the sensational deal by which President Jaems E. Gaffney of the Braves acquired the greatest second baseman in the game.

Soon after his arrival he was scheduled to meet Gaffney and Manager George T. Stallings, who came over from New York for the purpose, and who arrived here about the same time.

Evers declared, right o ffthe bat, that he wanted the Boston baseball public to forget all about his big salary and his reputation in baseball, and that he is an ex-big league manager. He asked the baseball public here to let him start as the youngest man on the team, with a chance to "make good" on the merits of what he may do here.

SPURS THE LIMELIGHT.

"I would like the Boston baseball public to know my position," said the great second baseman. "I want to forget the big salary I am getting from the Boston club and the handsome bonus paid me by President Gaffney.

"I don't want to be in the limelight. I want to be in the background. I simply want to do my best as a member of the Boston club. If Stallings says 'go and so' it's all right. I'll take my orders form the captain.

"I will look up to Stallings as though I was the rawest recruit and do exactly as he says. I want the public to know that I am with the Boston club to obey orders, forgetting that I held one of the most important positions in baseball only one scap ago."

Mr. Gaffney made a friend of me for life. I'll do anything for him. He sent me to the New York meeting last week. The difference between Charles Murphy, owner of the Cubs, and Jim Gaffney of the Braves is so great I can't realize it.

EXPECTS BRAVES IN FIRST THREE

"In my contract with the Boston club there is a clause giving me a bonus if the club finishes one-two-three this season. A friend of mine in Troy said to me last night:

"'What is the bonus thing in your contract, I read about, a policy?'

"I told him I didn't consider it a joke and I expect to win the bonus. Yes, sir, I think the Braves will finish in the first three at theend of the 1914 season."

"Do you expect to play second base?" I asked.

"I hope to, that's my natural position, but I'll do my best no matter where Stallings places me. I certainly hope Bill Sweeney stays with the team. He's a fine ball player and a fine man."

"Ever play third base?"

"Yes, three or four years ago, about twenty games."

"How did you make out?"

"Fine for the first ten games. After that I filled 07 get sick of playing third and wanted to get back to second again. It was the time I was sick most of teh year. Steinfeldt had quit the team and Chance was trying to break in a third baseman. He tried Zimmerman and Doyle and then asked me to try it."

WILL BE EARLY AT MACON.

Evers asked when the Boston players were to begin training and wanted to know all about Macon.

"I want to be in Macon for the

New York Still Choked With Snow

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Although a force of 20,000 men have been at work day and night since Sunday less than fifty of New York's 350 miles of streets were clear of snow today. Not before tomorrow night will traffic conditions be normal. The fire plugs have been dug out of the snow. So thick is the ice in the Hudson between this city and Yonkers that revenue cutters have been ordered to use dynamite to open a channel.

Former Baseball Star a Fire Hero

PAWTUCKET, Feb. 18.—Patrolman Charles Bassett, the old-time infielder in the National League, helped save the lives of George and Charles Phelan from fire at their lodgings, No. 23 Pawtucket avenue, early today. Bassett saw the smoke, rang in an alarm and, when the firemen came, directed them to the windows where the Phelans were waiting for relief, the smoke having cut off their stairway exit. Firemen brought the Phelans down the ladder.

Taxes Soar Under Rule of Socialists

GRANITE CITY, Ill., Feb. 18.—This city of 18,000 people, which has a Socialist Mayor, has the highest tax rate in Illinois, according to the annual report of the Tax Assessor. Foes of the Socialists point to the fact that when Mayor Fitzpatrick went into office three years ago it cost $35,000 a year to run the city, while now the annual budget is $91,000.

Rogers, Taken for Rich Man, Protests

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.— When Representative Rogers of Massachusetts discovered that he had been mistaken by the District of Columbia assessor for a millionaire, he did not expand with smiles of good humor; he raised "an awful howl," according to reports today. Rogers was assessed $15,000 on personal property. He went to the assessors' office and argued so successfully that his taxable property was cut down to $10,

Thousands Attend Kennedy Funeral

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Thousands of persons today attended the funeral of the late John J. Kennedy, State Treasurer of New York, who committed suicide to this city on Sunday. 10 British Warships for Mexican Fleet

LONDON, Feb. 18.—England is going to increase her fleet in Mexican waters to ten ships, it was reported in government circles today.

KNOWLTON NAMED BY GOVERNOR

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Former Chief Justice Marcus P. Knowlton of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, heads the list of trustees for the Boston & Maine Railroad submitted to Attorney-General McReynolds by Governor Walsh, the Governor stated today—when he went to the department of justice to renew his conference with officials on the plan for the New Haven dissolution.

A report in Washington that an agreement had been practically attained in the main propositions of the reorganization of the Boston & Maine Railroad was strengthened this noon when it was learned that Chairman Elliott of the New Haven and Governor Walsh were out at the first conference today at the Department of Justice.

Washington dispatches say that the minor details were left to be worked out by Assistants Attorney-Generals Adkins and Gregory, Walker D. Hines and Mortimer Storey of the New Haven; George W. Anderson of the Public Utilities Commission of Massachusetts and John W. Crim, counsel for Mr. Elliott. Governor Walsh and Elliott planned to confer with the attorney-general later.

Chairman Elliott said that it would be several days before even a rough outline of the situation could be drawn.

"You know you can't settle in a few days a thing that took twenty years to build," he said. "These matters will occupy our attention for several days. I have to go to New York tonight to attend a directors' meeting tomorrow after which I expect to return to Washington."

He added that the trades options had not yet figured in the discussions.

FAVOR POINTS AT ISSUE.

Up to the time that the conferees came together it was understood that no agreement was anything but near at hand.

The chief points at issue were said to be four, as follows:

1—The personnel of the Boston & Maine board of trustees.

2—The length of the trustees' term.

3—The number of trustees.

4—The trustees' power.

The dispute on personnel has been chiefly due to Governor Walsh's determined resistance that men prominent in public life in New England shall go on the board, rather than men known merely as financiers of almost national prominence, such as have been suggested by Chairman Elliott.

The Elliott has included:

George von L. Meyer, former Secretary of the Navy and chairman of the Boston & Maine stockholders' protective committee.

Alvord Crocker of Fitchburg.

Gardiner M. Lane, of Lee, Higginson & Co., bankers.

Governor Walsh's slate was this:

Former Governor Guild.

Justice James M. Morton.

Former Secretary of State Olney.

Public Service Commissioner George W. Anderson.

The Governor wanted Louis D. Brandeis, but the latter would not accept.

MRS. HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW, 2d, of Allston, whose life and the lives of whose children have been threatened by blackmailers.

MORE BRITISH WARSHIPS FOR MEXICAN COAST

Maximo Castilla, the Mexican bandit responsible for the death of fifty-one persons in the blasting of the tunnel at Cumbre will be held prisoner by the United States War Department until John Barrett Moore, counsellor for the State Department has decided what disposition shall be made of him.

ARMED GUARD AT HOME

The United States Postoffice authorities looks up today the hunt for the bomb men who have threatened to exterminate the family of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, 2d, of Allston, unless they are paid $10,000.

Mr. Longfellow, who is a relative in the third generation of the beloved New England poet of that name, has been told in three bold letters that, unless he gives up the money demanded, a son be killed, his wike will be killed and his two young boys will be kidnapped and his beatiful home at No. 2 Commonwealth avenue will be blown up with a bomb.

with it. If you do not, we will carry out our program and also blow up your home with bombs.

Mrs. Longfellow received a letter first, then Mr. Longfellow. Then he received a third one.

Mrs. Longfellow has received a final letter—or brief note—of warning, as follows:

Dear Lady: You have seen fit to make your husband tell secrets to Chief Wood. Be careful or we will kill him and your children, and get your husband to make a bill.

HOUSE GUARDED.

The arrival of the last one terrified both family alarm. Mr. Longfellow had notified the police and had put armed guards about the house, but he did not think it necessary to call in government help. But now no precautions are being overlooked.

The husband and wife are not so afraid of injury to themselves as they are of their children being kidnaped.

The boys are Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, eight years old, and Earl Longfellow, two years younger. Both are healthy, sturdy lads, to whom the restraint of being guarded all the time is a terrible hardship.

Mrs. Longfellow was quoted today as saying the four years she her husband's life was threatened he had received more than $1,000 and that the blackmailers have since left the city.

Mrs. Longfellow sifted this as a proof that these threats of death, injury or kidnaping are nothing to sneer at.

Mr. Longfellow's home is like an armed camp, especially at night. As soon as dusk comes a gang of Mr. Longfellow's workmen—he is a building contractor—take up their station in a vacant house next door. There they keep watch on all approaches. They are ready to shoot any intruder first and ask questions afterward.

This watch is in charge of O. Chisveon, who is a gang foreman employed by Mr. Longfellow. No matter has a theory that some discharged workman may be back of these threats. He thinks he knows all his past and present workmen by sight. Mr. Longfellow has no enemies of whom he has definite knowledge.

The two boys go to and from school in a high-powered automobile in charge of a maid, with the chauffeur as extra guard. They do not sleep and play from the lawn are always under the maid's watchful eye.

The Brighton police are keeping the premises under surveillance.

NEW MARRIAGE PLAN

A Link—Not a Handcuff

GIRL TO KEEP OWN NAME

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The following are some of the planks in the feminist platform as sawed, hammered and squared today by Crystal Eastman Benedict:

Make marriage a link—not a handcuff.

Educate a girl for life—not for marriage.

Discard the practice of assuming the husband's name on marriage and stick to your own.

Free men from dependent wives, for they are parasites.

Free women from the indignity of dependency upon men.

Change men's social garments.

According to Miss Benedict feminism means the preservation of women's individuality. She took a terrific wallop at the practice of alimony, declaring that all women should be financially independent.

WILSON URGES QUICK DECISION IN RATE CASE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—President Wilson at a conference with Chairman Clark of the Interstate Commerce Commission today urged a quick decision in the railroad freight increase case.

While the President does not intend to interfere in the matters now being held the conference was at the President's request, and public business and railroad situation of the country was under discussion.

Following the conference there was a general feeling prevailing that both the President and Chairman Clark believe that the request of the railroads for increased rates should be granted in some degree.

Although Chairman Clark would not discuss the situation the belief obtained in Washington that the President had reached an agreement as to the proper action to be taken after hearing Chairman Clark's views.

There are now three special railroad situations of special interest to President Wilson:

The Lehigh & Nashville, the Prisco, and the New Haven litigations. Those cases were discussed this morning and the President is said to be entirely independent of the discussion of the railroad rate hearings.

It was intimated that President Wilson is anxious to have the railroad rate hearings expedited as far as possible so as to end the present uncertainties and he also has expressed himself to this effect to Chairman Clark. Any great delay in reaching a decision on the rate question the president believes would be disastrous.

All Parties Against Party Enrollment

Republicans, Democrats and Progressives are joined today in favor of the abolishment of party enrollment at primary elections, at a legislative committee hearing on election laws. Joseph Walker said he believed thoroughly in party government and party responsibility, but said there was no measure of the direct primary laws that no went against the grain of the citizens of Massachusetts as the fact that they were obliged to go to the present time for one party or another before they were allowed to vote at a primary election.

a number of drawings. Often you would not recognize the sketches—he made so many changes from the original photograph."

Q.—What do you mean by 'changes'? A.—He put in scenery, indoors, marine or woodland.

SAW ARTIST AT WORK.

Q.—Did you ever see him paint a picture on a postcard or a draped or undraped figure? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see him paint any picture? A.—Yes.

Q.—What? A.—One was just of a girl; one was of a wood nymph.

She was shown a number of sketches of figures, in various stages of dress or undress.

"Please pick out the ones taken from this photograph of a nude girl which I show you." She picked out two.

She was shown two nude pictures of Helen Z. Graham, upon which Miss Graham's father based a civil suit against Mr Rider for $10,000.

Q.—Did Rider take those? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did you first see them? A.—I made the proofs.

Q.—Did Rider on one occasion show them to you? A.—He said it was a beautiful figure.

Q.—Did you telephone to Miss Graham arranging for her to pose? A.—Yes.

RIDER NEAR, SHE SAYS.

Q.—Was Mr. Rider present to tell you what to say? A.—He was within hearing of me.

This ended the cross-examination. H. B. Johnson in re-direct asked:

Q.—Did you know what became of the paintings Mr. Rider took from the nude? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever know him to sell any paintings? A.—Yes, landscape.

Q.—Did he sell any photographs? A.—He sold ordinary photographs.

Q.—Did you ever have a picture of Miss Graham in the nude? A.—No.

Q.—Have you furnished reporters any nude pictures of Miss Graham? A.—No.

Q.—Have you given reporters any pictures? A.—Yes, I gave them a picture of Miss Graham and myself.

Q.—What did it look like? A.—It has been published.

Q.—How were you dressed in that picture? A.—Ordinary street clothes.

Q.—Was that picture taken by Rider? A.—No.

Mr. Johnson announced the government would rest. Mr. Wright had the Alice witness sworn—Ien Wood. Johnson asked:

"Are you going to swear Mr. Rider as a witness?"

Wright replied: "I don't know whether I will call him or not."

CALLS GIRL'S FATHER.

Mr. Johnson thereupon got permission to call two additional witnesses. The first was Mrs. Ida Graham, wife of Helen Graham. He was questioned thus:

Q.—Do you know Rider? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever talk to him? A.—Yes, by telephone.

Q.—When? A.—The day after he took those pictures of Helen. He called up and said he must see me. I was angry. I told him not to come near my house, that I wanted nothing to do with him. He offered to buy the pictures, but I referred him to my lawyer.

Attorney Bernard F. Murphy was then called. He told of seeing Rider talking with Attorney Patrick J. Duane, former Mayor of Waltham, in Mr. Duane's office.

"Duane asked Rider if he took the pictures of Miss Graham. Rider said he did, but that he thought there was no liability. Duane said, 'If that was a picture of my daughter, I would knock your head off, right in my office.' Rider promised Duane he would break the plates of the pictures."

John A. S. Monks, a Wakefield artist, was the first witness for the defence. He said the usual method employed by artists was to photograph nude women or girls, then make sketches or paintings from these pictures.

TELLS OF POSING.

Mrs. Rosalie B. Wallace of No. 135 Appleton street, Boston, was called. She said she had known Rider for about six years.

Q.—Did you ever pose for him? A.—Yes.

Q.—How? A.—Sometimes partially draped, sometimes undraped.

Q.—When was this? A.—In 1910 and 1911.

Q.—Was there a certain drawer in his cabinet always kept locked? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know anything as to his sales of pictures? A.—No. I have taken orders for sketches for calender work.

Q.—Did he ever show you sketches and ask you if you knew suitable subjects for similar poses? A.—Yes.

Neither Mrs. Wallace nor any other defence witness was cross-examined. Bertha Edmands, a sixteen-year-old girl living at No. 168 Melrose street, Auburndale, said she had posed for Rider, but denied that he ever showed her any undraped photograph.

Louis Kirsch, of No. 1251 Washington street, West Newton, said his eleven-year-old daughter posed for Rider.

Isabel Patterson, of No. 15 Auburn street, Auburndale, a girl of eighteen, was asked if she had posed for Rider, but the question was excluded. She was asked: "Was Rider ever anything but a gentleman?" This also was excluded. Mrs. Mary A. Baldwin of Auburndale was called and questioned as to her niece having posed, but the questions were excluded.

Catherine Reynolds, of No. 62 Elm street, West Newton, a girl of eighteen, said she had worked for Rider. Court then adjourned till afternoon.

Mrs. Harriett B. Furbush, who testified in a cross divorce libel against Wesley Furbush, twice drew on the stand in the East Cambridge Court today, when accused of preventing relatives from visiting her husband while he was sick.

"This is an outrage," she cried.

Mrs. Furbush further testified to having learn her husband say into the telephone that he had made a present of a hammock to Miss Lillian Parker, a Newton school teacher, and to having met Miss Parker in her husband's company on numerous occasions. She said her husband refused to serve her with food at the table, and he said on one occasion, 'I do not want you to talk to me.'

He said he didn't care any more about me than he did about a tree, she continued.

"Why, he ripped the buttons off my dress, slapped my face, choked me and banged my head against the wall, struck me with his fist on the ear. He also said: 'Wouldn't I love to kill you?'

Mrs. Furbush declared her relations with James L. Wilde, a Weymouth piano teacher, and James O. Bailey, her husband's brother, were proper.

PIN STUCK IN BRAIN TO MAKE GIRL INSANE

Dr. Richard Wynne of Boston testified today at the trial in New York of Harry Grant Guertin and J. Addington Fuller, Boston detectives, on charges of conspiracy to commit perjury, that the injury Miss Guertin claimed she received in a taxicab accident was really inflicted with a pin, which was thrust into her head, producing temporary mania.

The counts are indicted for conspiracy to obtain $75,000 damages from the Massachusetts Taxicab Company. They test their suit against the company.

Dr. Wynne swore Miss Guertin told him that a taxicab in which she and Patrick Golding had collided with a curb, but that she had suffered from the scene to the Grand Central station, where she and Patron rendered the plot. Patron, according to Wynne's testimony, took a hat pin and lanced a wound on Miss Guertin's head. The woman then went to Dr. Wynne for treatment. He said she was suffering from a septic hematoma.

VANDERBILTS' JERICHO HILLS HOME BURNED

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The new quarter of a million dollar mansion owned by Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., on Jericho hills, three miles from Westbury, Long Island, was swept by fire today. Despite the efforts of volunteer firemen the mansion was wrecked, with $175,000 loss, while $40,000 worth of furnishings went up in smoke.

The house was completed in December and had just been furnished. Only servants were in the house at the time. Mrs. Vanderbilt and a number of guests having gone bob-sled riding.

RIGID PROBE OF VIVISECTION ON LITTLE BABIES

ALBANY, Feb. 18.—The admissions of Dr. Hideyo Noguchi of Rockefeller Institute, that he inoculated forty-six normal children with the luetin emulsion, and that he substituted "human subjects" for animals at the suggestion of Dr. S. Welch, has aroused law makers. Senator Walter E. Herrick, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, announces his determination to insist upon immediate passage of his bill for the appointment of a commission to investigate human and animal vivisection and experimentation.

"My preliminary investigation," said Senator Herrick, "convinced me of the astounding brutality and heartlessness of some physicians and surgeons in trying out their pet theories on helpless subjects. These facts, however, were insignificant compared with the revelations made through the AMERICAN by Michael Joseph Whitty, of the American Institute of Social Service.

"I shall urge upon my colleagues the immediate passage of my bill framed to stop these abuses. I cannot conceive that any one possessing any degree of sympathy, can fail to be aroused to most energetic action in support of the measure.

"My bill provides for a commission to investigate human and animal experimentation. It has been misunderstood by many and taken to be an anti-vivisection measure.

"The commission is to be financed by public-spirited citizens and associations to inquire into abuses in performing experiments by doctors or others on animals and human beings. The inquiry as to experimentation on animals is a minor matter compared to that on human beings.

"It may be, that the commission's report will not be ready until after the Legislature has adjourned, but there is a body that can investigate these charges immediately, and that is the Grand Jury. I urge upon the worthy people who have collected the facts as to these practices to place them before the District Attorneys of the counties where the acts have been perpetrated and to co-operate with the District Attorney in every possible way in prosecuting the cases to the fullest extent."

Shovellers Form Union and Strike

Seventy-five men in the temporary employ of the Boston Elevated Company, shovelling snow from the company's tracks in Roslindale and West Roxbury, today formed a "Snow Shovellers' Union" and went on strike for $2 a day on an eight-hour basis. The railway officials ordered the suspension of a new rate at the rate of $1.75 a day, which is working in West Roxbury under the protection of the police.

BRITISH PEER HORSEWHIPPED BY MILITANT

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Lord Weardale, one of the leaders in the peace centenary to celebrate 100 years of peace between Great Britain and the United States, was attacked by a suffragette in Euston railway station today, knocked from his feet and badly beaten with a dog whip.

The suffragette, after being locked up, declared that she had mistaken Lord Weardale for Premier Asquith.

"It was Premier Asquith I wanted to lash," she declared.

The peer was accompanied by Lady Weardale when the attack occurred. They were waiting for a train when a good-looking woman approached Lord Weardale as though to ask him a question. As the nobleman turned toward her the young woman drew a dog whip from her jacket and began striking at his face.

KNOCKED OFF FEET.

Lord Weardale was so astonished that he could hardly move while Lady Weardale began screaming for a policeman. One blow knocked the peer from his feet and as he lay prone the woman continued to inflict blows.

A postman, attracted by the crowd, ran up and placed the woman under arrest. A taxicab was called and Lord Weardale was conveyed to his home.

The nobleman's face was seamed with welts and his lip cut by the whip.

NEPHEW OF EARL.

Lord Weardale is a Liberal, is president of the Inter-Parliamentary Union and is one of the most influential members of the upper house of Parliament. He is a nephew of the Earl of Stanhope and recently visited the United States in behalf of the movement to celebrate 100 years of peace between the two lands. He is also a writer of note having written a history of England. He is opposed to women's suffrage.

At the time of the attack Lord and Lady Weardale were en route to Northampton to attend the wedding of the Hon. Sidney Peel and Lady Delia Spencer. The station was crowded with about 200 members of aristocratic leaders on their way to the same function.

EARTH BELTED FOUR TIMES

Some Figures That Stagger, and Facts Which Perplex the Average Person.

It is only by comparisons that one may partially appreciate the greatness of unusual undertakings when the figures themselves perplex the mind. A million railroad cars convey little meaning, but when one is told that a train of one million 50-foot cars would reach from New York to San Francisco and almost back to New York the statement registers a more understandable impression.

It is extremely difficult to comprehend the magnitude of what has been achieved in the little republic of Panama during the construction of the great canal. Panama looks small on the map. The "big ditch" is but fifty miles in length, yet the earth and rock excavated during the period of construction, if placed in flat-bottomed railroad cars, would make a continuous train more than 98,000 miles long, and would extend four times around the earth at its greatest circumference. Each of these cars averaged twenty feet in length, more than 28,000,000 of them would constitute this gigantic train.

The story of Panama, the canal and the people is full of surprises and astounding facts. "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose" is the only book which tells you all about it.

Read the Panama certificate in another column. And learn how you can get this remarkable volume on terms which place it within easy reach of every reader of this paper.

Keep School Children's Heads Clean

Don't pull their hair out with a fine comb or cover it with poisonous grease. Use a pure, mild and effective shampoo and rinse, such as recommended by physicians and health authorities almost the world over—Packer's Tar Soap. Wet the hair with water and rub thoroughly with Packer's Tar Soap. Then wet and shampoo made especially for this purpose, which can be obtained at druggists. The Tar Soap will form a rich lather, which should be allowed to remain on the hair for three minutes, thoroughly rinsing out with clear water, rub dry and comb the hair. Using this every week will keep the hair perfectly clear of all nits, dandruff germs and dirt, and it will never fall or need new coloring. It will keep it soft and fluffy, prevent its falling out and promote its healthy growth. A trial cost is sufficient for several months' use. Mother's should save this notice. Do not take any substitute as Fitzgerald Soap Co., Collingwood, Ohio, will send you this soap by mail on receipt of price.

SUFFRAGISTS TEST TANGO AT BALL TONIGHT

Mrs. Oakes Ames, recently elected treasurer of the Massachusetts Women's Suffrage Association, and many other prominent society women are included in the committee in charge of arrangements for the suffrage ball at the Copley-Plaza tonight. The suffragists call the ball a pre-victory celebration, since they are confident of success in their campaign before the Legislature this year.

There will be men at the ball, of course, but only as guests. Women will receive, serve, and take charge of the floor. Visitors are coming from all over New England, and boxes at $50 each are sold out.

To find out for themselves whether the tango is proper the women will have a demonstration by Joseph Santley, of the Cort Theatre, and two girls of his company. Mrs. Benjamin F. Pitman of Carleton street, Longwood, is chairman of the committee in charge; Miss Fanny C. Osgood, treasurer; Mrs. Walter Gilman Page, recording secretary, and Miss Harriet L. De Normandie, corresponding secretary.

The committee in charge of the boxes, which are erected on a platform under the balcony, is made up of Mrs. Wirt Dexter, chairman, Mrs. George R. Pearing, Mrs. Pitman, Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, and Miss Caroline Amory. Box holders are Mrs. Pitman, Mrs. McKean, Mrs. Robert G. Shaw, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. R. G. Shaw, 2d, Mrs. Stewart Clarke, Mrs. John C. Edwards and Mrs. Robert D. Evans.

Castor Oil Is Tasteless Now

A Remarkable Step Forward in Oil Refining.

Pure, clear castor oil, without taste or smell, is a recent discovery of the house of Spencer Kellogg & Sons, refiners of vegetable oils.

The Kellogg Mills take away the nauseating taste, but remove none of the good properties of castor oil.

As Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil is merely a purified castor oil, it works better than the evil-tasting, evil-smelling dose of the past, and does not upset the stomach. Children take it easily.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil has been supplied to all druggists, not in bulk, but in neat 25c and 50c bottles. It is necessary to ask for Kellogg's by name, to distinguish it from disguised castor oil, flavored with peppermint and other strong essences. The trademark label bears a green castor leaf, with the signature, Kellogg's.

Made only by Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., oil refiners.

KIPLING TALKS OF NEW TRAVEL OF THE FUTURE

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Rudyard Kipling made one of his very rare public appearances at Queen's Hall, where he lectured before the Royal Geographical Society to a large audience, including many seasoned explorers, on "Some Aspects of Travel."

In a characteristic passage Kipling spoke of the typical smells encountered in travel:

"Have you noticed that wherever a few travelers are gathered together one man or another is sure to say, 'Do you remember that smell at such a place?' Then he may go on to speak of camel, pure camel, one whiff of which is all Arabia, or of the smell of rotten eggs at Hirt, on the Euphrates, or of the flavor of drying fish in Burma.

TWO ELEMENTARY SMELLS.

"There are only two elementary smells of universal appeal," Kipling declared; "the smell of burning fuel and the smell of melting grease; the smell, that is, of what man cooks his food over and what he cooks his food in."

Speaking of the travel of the future he said:

"Naturally, so long as we travel by sea we must embark from a port and look for landfalls, but the time is not far off when the traveler will know or care as little whether he is out at sea or over land as we today know and care whether our steamer is over forty fathoms or a Tuscarora deep.

"Then we shall hear the lost ports of New York or Bombay hurling like Tarshish and Tyre. Incidentally we shall change all our mental pictures of travel."

WORK FOR EXPLORERS YET.

The lecturer paid an eloquent tribute to modern explorers:

"The spirit of man carries him on unaltered and unappeasable," he said. "There will arise risks to be met as cruel as any Hudson or Scott faced; dreams, as world-wide as those Columbus or Hudson dreamed, to be made good or to die for, and decisions to be taken as splendidly terrible as that Drake clinched by Magellan or Oates, a little further south.

"The men of the present have begun the discovery of a new world with the same devoutly careless passion as that with which their predecessors completed the discovery of the old."

Now let me thank you for your wonderful discovery and take this opportunity to recommend it to all who suffer from kidney troubles.

Yours very truly,

Christening of Opera Baby Is Recorded in Rhyme

NOTE—Ferrari-Fontana's baby Adrienne was christened today by Cardinal O'Connell. Following the ceremony the Fontanas entertained a large gathering of opera singers and critics at the Hotel Lenox at luncheon.

The Operatic Christening.
By F. J. M'ISAAC.

Oh, Ferrari-Fontana, the great tenor singer,
And his wife Matzenauer, the contraito so grand,
Have sent through the town the official bull ringer,
And put to good use the opera brass band.

It seems that a daughter is born to Fontana,
And kids are not frequent in opera land,
So sound the loud timbrel, and wave the big banner,
And haste to the christening's the order command.

Lucrezia Bori and Pasqual Amato,
Nielsen and Scotti, and plump Terrazini,
Melba and Farrar, and Signor Umberto
The goodliest company ever was seen.

Lina Cavalieri and jolly Em Destinn
Caruso and Garden and Vanni Marcoux,
Laffite, Constantino, and all of the rest in
Opera, whose names are familiar to you.

A dozen fat chefs are at work at the griddle,
Preparing the feast for the marvelous throng,
And the singers all dance to the sound of the fiddle
Of old Toscanini, who couldn't go wrong.

Caruso himself has prepared the spaghetti,
Tetrazzini has fixed the salad de saison,
Each humming a tune from old man Donizetti
Using the egg beater as a baton.

Fontana appears at the door with emotion,
And takes a high C to climb over the din,
"Now, friends, one and all, I ask your devotion
The baby is christened, petite Adrienne."

Now up jump the singers and loudly cry "Viva,"
In voices we rate at a billion or more,
And up starts the music, and seized by the fever
The signers then tango all over the floor.

Oh never was seen such a wonderful christening,
As Ferrari-Fontana's petite Adrienne,
And all of the ladies kissed the sweet baby
And some of the ladies then kissed a few men.

FLYNN TO PAY WIFE $20 OF HIS $60 A MONTH

As befits the romance of Maurice P. (Lefty) Flynn, the former Yale football star and Irene Claire, the show girl, formerly Reta Leary of Holyoke, was heard today when dispatches from Syracuse, N. Y., announced that a final decree of divorce had been entered there for Mrs. Flynn.

By the final decree Flynn must pay the show girl $20 a month alimony. He had filed papers showing that he was receiving $60 a month as a contractor's clerk. He must also pay the $535 costs in the divorce case and is forbidden to wed again in New York State.

The final decree also revealed that a certain "Pauline" was named in the charges made by Mrs. Flynn.

Irene Claire was in the Winter Garden production in New York when "Lefty" Flynn ran over from New Haven to Broadway and met her early last Winter. He was a graduate of Yale College in 1912 and had gone into the Sheffield Scientific School for a postgraduate course in engineering.

Flynn and the show girl went to New York City Hall in January, 1913, and were married. It was an elopement, the parents of neither one knowing about the wedding plans.

There was a lot of publicity right away. Flynn left Yale and went up to Canada on a civil engineering job. A few months after marriage Mrs. Flynn sued for divorce. She accused "Lefty" on statutory grounds. The suit was tried last Summer and Mrs. Flynn received her decree nisi.

After receiving her final papers Mrs. Flynn went to Europe. She brought back from Paris a rope of pearls, which were so costly, according to report that she had to pay $1,000 duty on the pearls and other valuables.

Last January Mrs. Flynn was reported to have acquired possession of a $115,000 house in the "Seventies" in New York city.

TWO INNOCENT MEN ARRESTED AS "HOLDUPS"

Row Reserve Officer March arrested the wrong young men in a holdup case was brought out today in South Boston.

The victims of the wrong arrest are Frank J. Sheehan, sixteen years old, and his friend Albert Leary. They are the youths who were arrested Monday night, a few minutes after Miss Annie Heirty, an Elevated collector, had been robbed near her home on West Ninth street, South Boston, by two young men who secured her mesh bag, with $3.50, and ran away in the storm.

Sheehan and Leary denied the charge in South Boston District Court yesterday, but were held for continued hearing, Saturday. Elliot Sheehan's father, Michael Sheehan secured a lawyer and bail for the boys and protested. Sheehan only is over the court corridors that the arrest was wrong.

About this time Patrolman Ferguson was getting a confession from Henry J. Coyne that he and another chap did the hold-up trick. Ferguson was after Coyne for breaking into William E. Cullen's stable two weeks ago and stealing 140 pounds of copper. He found Coyne at his home, No. 39 Preble street. Coyne, who has a reform school record, admitted the stable break.

ADMITTED HOLDUP.

"Say, NOW," said Ferguson, "didn't you pull that holdup trick on West Ninth street last night, too?"

Coyne flared up at this, but finally admitted the holdup. He was locked up on both charges. All day he was grilled to tell who was with him in the holdup. Finally he named Patrick J. O'Brien of No. 25 Perkins street, Jamaica Plain, who was found in a lunchroom reading room.

Coyne pleaded guilty in South Boston District Court today to the stable and holdup charges and was held in $500 each for the Grand Jury.

O'Brien denied being in the holdup, but he was held in $500 for the Grand Jury. He and Coyne have reform school records.

The arrest of Coyne and O'Brien and the confession of Coyne raised question why Reserve Officer March arrested Leary and Sheehan.

It seems that March heard Miss Heirty screaming at her front door. He came up and, getting the best description Miss Heirty could give of her assailants, started out to get somebody.

"LOOKED LIKE" CULPRITS.

He hurried through Middle street and met Sheehan and Leary, who were returning from work. They answered the descriptions in a general way and, to their paralyzed amazement, were arrested as holdup men.

March marched them to Miss Heirty's house. He says the girl identified them. She says she told March that they "looked like" the ones.

March took them to the station and booked them on the flat robbery charge on this much of an identification, despite the vigorous protest of the lads that they didn't know anything about the holdup.

Their cases were continued yesterday morning until next Saturday. When their lawyer learned today of the arrest and holding of Coyne and O'Brien he asked Judge Fallon to dispose of his clients without delay, but Judge Fallon let the continuance stand, as they were out on bail.

'BULGARIAN BABIES DYING LIKE FLIES'

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Howard Brown, a Manchester merchant who has just returned from the Balkans, gave the AMERICAN today an appalling story of the conditions of the Bulgarian refugees.

"I went there on a business trip solely," he said, "and had no prejudice regarding any Balkan races, but what I saw at Sofia induced me to investigate elsewhere. I must admit that, as far as possible, the Bulgarian government is doing all it can to help the refugees, but with the resources at present at their command it is impossible for them to do much.

"Outside of Sofia the conditions are heartrending. It is one's absolute helplessness to mitigate the dreadful destitution that hurts worse than anything else. It makes the heart bleed to see the poor women starving themselves in order to keep a morsel of food for their children.

"The dogs will not eat, but it is only a drop in an ocean. Young babies are dying like flies for want of milk and clothing. The mothers are pictures of gaunt starvation, all bear a look of hopeless misery.

"In Sofia and its suburbs for one advertising I saw that 'Mellin's Food is without a rival,' as would not feel comfortable if I left out a few of the 'Mellin's Food' babies. I have been for pain and fever and wounded cases. All for A.S. lab. Sofia. Dept. for cessation of [illegible] Medicine.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean and thus avoid serious kidney disease.

We Have Done It!

When the leading engineers of France called a halt on Panama Canal operations, admitting that the problem was too great for them, practically the entire world accepted this abandonment as conclusive evidence that the canal was a dream, impossible of realization.

The Impossible Has Been Accomplished

The dauntlessness of American engineers has proved the contrary. The canal is a reality, and surpasses every other human achievement down to the present time.

Steamship companies are charting new routes which shorten ocean travel several thousand miles per trip. Our country is the chief beneficiary. Pacific coast fruits can be delivered in New York by the Panama Canal route in 16 days—only 4 or 5 days more than by fast railroad freight, and at a much lower transportation charge. This is but one of the many benefits which follow the opening of the canal to ocean-going vessels.

How Well Are You Informed on This Subject?

DO YOU KNOW

WHAT our government contemplates doing in the way of armed defences?
HOW much the canal has cost the United States?
WHAT the annual operating expenses will be?
THE rates of toll, and how collected?
THE nature of our jurisdiction over the Panama land concession?
OUR policy as to the use of the canal by belligerents in time of war?
WHETHER or not International Law will permit us to show discrimination?
HOW we were persuaded to undertake the task after it had been discarded?
WHAT amount we paid France for the transfer to us of their rights?
HOW many locks are used and their size?
WHETHER or not vessels will be permitted to go through the canal under their own power?
HOW many vessels can be accommodated daily?
ITS rank with other feats of engineering?
THE possibilities of future danger from landslides like those in the pass?
THE benefit of saving on ocean freights?
THE size, population and rank of Panama?
THE climate, mineral, agricultural and manufacturing resources—official enterprise?
THE history of Panama, and characteristics of its people?
HOW governed—educational and penal systems?

ALL THIS AND EVERYTHING ELSE ABOUT THE CANAL AND PANAMA SHOULD BE KNOWN TO ALL AMERICANS.

CHARLESTOWN REJOICES OVER SHIP CONTRACT

President Wilson is expected to ask Congress for an appropriation of $146,800 for a ship-building ways at the Charlestown Navy Yard. This is a preliminary to the building of the supply ship, the contract for which has been awarded to the Charlestown yard.

The news that Secretary Daniels had given the contract to Boston caused rejoicing in Charlestown today. The contract means that the force of employes will be increased, and that a million dollars will go for materials and in wages.

The supply ship, according to Congressman Ernest W. Roberts, will probably be laid down next Fall or in the early Winter.

Naval Constructor Baxter of the yard says:

"It will take about six months to build the ways after we get the appropriation. Our present force of 1,200 will be boosted to 1,700. And next Fall we can begin on the supply ship."

The Charlestown yard's bid for the ship was about $200,000 below the next lowest bidder.

Among the organizations which today passed resolutions approving the contract was the Pattern Makers' Association. They said:

"The navy yard is one of the best equipped in the country. It has an organization second to none. The officers in charge are men who have been well trained.

"With this organization and the equipment of the yard there is no question but what the government can build the supply ship at Boston at less expense than it could be built for elsewhere. If the government is to build a new ship, by assigning the work to Boston it will not only have the advantage of working under this perfect organization, but it will also have the advantage of reducing very materially the cost of repair work, since part of the overhead expense can be charged off to both new and old work."

URGES STATE EXHIBIT FAIR SEX'S PROGRESS

Mrs. Caroline Nelson of the Woman's Homestead Association appeared before Ways and Means Committee to plead for an appropriation of $25,000 for a permanent industrial exhibit for women, in which they can show their progress for the past fifty years in industrial and commercial interests.

"Men have an opportunity to show what they can do in their exhibits, why not women?" asked Mrs. Nelson.

"Women have been a success in the commercial world. They want to show how they can run a business, how they have made a farm pay, and how they have succeeded as inventors.

"There is nothing like telling people what they don't know. There was a time when some people thought women could not make anything more than schoolma'ams. Women make themselves efficient in any work. So we want this exhibit to drive it home to some thoughtless beings who still imagine that women are only capable in a few matters, most of them belonging to the household."

WORK TO FIGURE OUT HOW PUZZLE CLOCK WORKS

Chatter! Chatter! Chatter!

No, it isn't the alarm clock. It isn't time to rout out of bed these frosty mornings. It's the clock in the clock puzzle the AMERICAN has been printing, and thousands of New Englanders have been trying to figure out how it works. Replies have poured in.

Here's the puzzle:

"If a calender clock, which indicates the second, minute, hour and the day of the month shows the correct time at 5 p. m. on Saturday, January 17, and gains 10 minutes daily, what will be the correct time when the clock indicates that it is 5 p. m. on February 12?"

Here are some of the answers:

W. H. Ramey, No. 21, Broadway, Everett, 12:05:00 a. m.; William Banville, No. 1170 Washington street, Boston, who is in John Hancock, Feb. 18, 1914, 12:05:00 a. m.; M. CLEVELAND, Feb. 18.—If their adding machines hold out, Tax Commissioners Fackler and Agnew intent to get those Rockefeller taxes yet.

Today they shut themselves up in their office and set to work preparing a personal property tax list for John D. Rockefeller. But the adding machines only add five figures, and the result was they had to do a lot of adding right out of their own heads.

Mr. Rockefeller has smilingly ignored their demands that he list his property. But now the officials say they have discovered a way to tax him $35,000,000. They say that under the 1914 tax laws they are allowed to list his $900,000,000 each year since 1911, with a fifty per cent. penalty for failure to make a return each year. Then Mr. Rockefeller would be taxed on a fortune of three billions—which even he does not possess.

Governor Cox says Rockefeller will pay the tax or he'll know the reason why.

FIRE IN ATHOL BANK DRIVES OUT 7 IN COLD

Athol, Feb. 18.—Seven persons were driven to the street—where the mercury registered fifteen below zero—when fire was discovered at 2:40 this morning in the annex of the Millers River National Bank building.

It was the second fire in the building within a year. The damage is estimated at $10,000 to the annex, while smoke made the main building uninhabitable, and four feet of water in the cellar made it impossible to light furnace fires.

The Millers River National Bank and the Athol Savings Bank transferred their funds and their cash to the Pepper Hotel, across the street, and there under special police guard conducted their business today.

Two alarms were rung for the fire, which started in the basement under Andelos Restaurant, sandy adjoining. William Nemo, who lives on the second floor, was awakened by the smell of smoke, and roused the dwellers in the apartments on the second and third floors. Miss Anna McCormick, a manicurist, Mrs. Jessie Gordon, Mrs. Carl Parker, Mr. and Mrs. George Perham and Mr. and Mrs. Nemo were those who fled to the street with what garments they could snatch.

Dr. W. J. Hilton has an office on the second floor, but was at his home in Colton. Miss Anna McCormick and Miss Gordon were tenants of the building which burned last March.

The latter said on the dresser's difficulties grew. As dawn the fire was under control.

Hub Woman Charges De Luxe Book Fraud

Alleging that she paid more than $87,000 for "de luxe editions" of books, which she now declares worth about $1,000, Marion W. Preston of Boston has started suit in the United States District Court in Philadelphia to recover $62,490 from George Barrie & Sons; John F. Scanlon, James J. Farmer, individually, and as trustee of Clara G. Farmer, Clara G. Farmer and the Anglo-American Authors' Association, Incorporated, of New York.

The papers allege the defendants conspired with their agents to defraud her in a number of transactions since 1901 by promulgating to her a false profit city of the books which she purchased from them.

SLEEPLESSNESS

A thousand years till morning! What is the matter? You are dead tired and worn out, but you cannot sleep.

Sleeplessness drives away beauty and shatters health. It breaks down the strongest and kills energy. One sleepless night works more lasting injury than days of overwork.

Insomnia is Nature's revolt against outrage. The nerves are being tortured and they rebel. Nearly always the stomach trouble accompanies it. The whole body is being starved. Nerves and blood and muscle and tissue cry out for food. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the unfailing help for this condition.

Take courage if you suffer in this way, or with any chronic trouble of the nerves and blood. The glorious record of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is written in the grateful words of thousands.

Dr. Greene is the well known public medical adviser and specialist in treatment of all nervous and chronic diseases, and can be consulted by mail free, or he may have them come to his office and laboratory, 35½ Albany St., Boston.

128 DISHES ARE SET BEFORE THE HEARTY LEGISLATORS TODAY

Today's bills of fare before various committees at the State House:

Abolishing the Governor's Council.

Ditto the State Senate.

Protesting to Washington against "negro segregation."

Cultivation of oysters.

Sunday baseball.

Stopping Sunday concerts.

Taking away the elevated structures and building more subways.

Getting a new Adjutant-General.

There were 128 different matters on the daily list.

* * *

Several large petitions presented to the Legislature by Morrison I. Swift, and duly referred to the Committee on Social Welfare, have received from that committee the leave to withdraw — presumably. Among them:

Providing for the rational and voluntary segregation of society.

That Boston shall abolish slums.

The dissolution of the "as is" disease.

And the purchase of the M. I. T. buildings in Boylston street for the establishment of a social and educational centre under city auspices.

* * *

The House will give tomorrow afternoon a different view of the salaries and office expenses of Highway Commissioners Sohier, Kemp and Synan.

* * *

Discovery of the absence of a quorum stopped the business of the Legislature yesterday afternoon in the very act of enjoying Beacon Hill's favorite indoor sport — talking about a statue to General Ben Butler. The talkfest will be continued today.

* * *

Representative Edward N. Dahlborg, Democrat, of Brockton, defended the "west General Court" recommendation of the Committee on State House Economy and Efficiency in favor of Dahlborg, who certainly was not personally responsible for General Butler, having made his first appearance in this vale of tears twenty-two years after the close of the war, the principal objection to a Butler statue this year is the expense.

* * *

"He came down from New Hampshire to look after the interests of Senator Sawyer of Ware, Progressive, representative Sawyer was speaking of Butler.

* * *

Which shows that history still repeats itself, for Ireland came down from New Hampshire and Boland has made good.

* * *

Not to mention others, Mr. Chairman, who might fairly be mentioned in this connection.

* * *

All of which was too much for John Donovan, and the lawyer of Chinatown proceeded to eulogize Butler.

* * *

"They didn't use Butler out in the Black Hall," said John L. Sullivan, when you get through on this gathering. This is the whole story of the opposition to a Butler statue.

* * *

"Butler's services to his country and his State should properly be commemorated in some public way, but he wasn't a drawing-room hero, Mr. Speaker. He came from the plain people. He remembered the plain people. Before the war he had invited the unworthy and the unfortunate. They let up on him during that great struggle because, for one thing — they long learned the hands of the plain water — they were so far away that none could have heard them. By the time they began to come back and, when their departures had been forgotten, began inviting Butler again."

* * *

Mr. Donovan was talking most interestingly, in this delightfully informal manner, when the roll of the House counted and the absence of a quorum sent everybody home to supper.

* * *

The motor truck interests, not only of the Commonwealth but of the country at large, are stoutly opposed to a Highway Commission report recommendation that motor trucks be assessed a graded fee based on their tonnage.

According to Chairman Sohier of the Highway Commission, it is going to be impossible to maintain the highways of Massachusetts unless something is done about the motor trucks, says Colonel Sohier.

* * *

"Much the larger part of the 27,000 miles of road in Massachusetts to-day were built for horse traffic and possibly maintain them. Bridges in the smaller communities are not adequate to bear the strain put upon them by these three and five-ton vehicles.

"In one town — the town of Richmond — $1 was added to tax rate to a single day through the destruction of three bridges by a single motor truck.

"Last year there were 2,343 of these trucks in Massachusetts; the year before, 1,800; their number is constantly increasing. I know gentlemen are going to say that the truck is a business asset, enabling business to do more cheaply, but I do not believe that anybody has a right to put a higher charge upon a community — particularly a community where he does not belong — of one, or ten times the amount he makes out of his trade. Our small country towns cannot stand it. Failing such legislation as we now propose I fear we shall be compelled to map out routes for this sort of traffic."

Which is interesting, as has been said before in these columns, and one hears the other side. For example, the testimony of C. Mack of Methuen, market gardener:

* * *

"I want to say to the committee," declared Mr. Mann, "that the motor truck is doing more than any other to keep the cost of living from going higher that the cost has jumped even the money. I have seen my produce cut from Boston. It would be impossible for me to get it to market and get back with horse-drawn vehicles. I have been using a two-and-a-half motor truck for three years. I can be between an hour and a half and two hours with from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds.

"Tax me $100 for using this truck and who will pay the bill? Will I? I don't think so. I contribute about it. The natural thing will be to add it to the cost of the fruit, and now I look to the people of Boston. I say you want to think twice before you do this."

* * *

"And permit me," said Fred E. Batchelder of the Pacific Mills, "to point out that taxing the motor truck is as sweeping as to be obviously unfair.

"The Pacific now uses no horses. We have eighteen big autos, from three-quarters to a ton and a half in capacity. The point I want to make is that the Pacific pays a fine every week in city, town or State highway other than the granite-blocked pavement of Richmond Street. The real are confined to mill property."

* * *

"And in the case of the Cambridge Electric Light Company," said Mr. Batchelder, "we have found that our five-ton trucks travel between the plant and the wharf, never touching the paved highways."

* * *

Other opponents of the Highway Commission recommendation pointed out that the story of the three bridges destroyed by a single motor truck is old before, with the result that there is now a law assessing a fine of $100 and declaring upon the owner of the truck; that it would be obviously unjust to tax a garden with two motor trucks alone and let 50 per cent. of the vehicles in the State escape; that the motor truck has brought the farm and the city into closer communication; that, in addition, that the motor truck is "a modern necessity in modern business."

* * *

"Like to ask Mr. Batchelder of the Pacific Mills for information," said Senator Bagley of the committee.

"What should be done, Mr. Batchelder, to poor, ailing, old Senator Bagley who puts an extra ton or two on his truck?"

"If he's his own reward," said the mill man, "when the tire bills come in."

Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Worcester has asked the Committee on Legislative Expenditures to explain why the Commonwealth is going to be impossible to maintain the highways of Massachusetts unless something is done about the motor trucks, says Colonel Sohier.

* * *

"Much the larger part of the 27,000 miles of road in Massachusetts to-day were built for horse traffic and possibly maintain them. Bridges in the smaller communities are not adequate to bear the strain put upon them by these three and five-ton vehicles.

COUNT GETRICH.....Carl Erlanger
HIS RIVAL.....Harold Reese

CHAPTER I.

The Girl had an unemotional father, who pooh-poohed at the idea of love. Anything with love mixed up in it he mistrusted, by instinct and by habit. Therefore he was determined that his pretty and romantic daughter should marry Count Getrich.

No girl, by any possibility, could love Count Getrich, who affected youthful ardor, but wore corsets and was palpably "made up." Father knew that the Girl could not be deceived in such matters. To realize that the Count had a rival who was decidedly young and ardent caused his much worry; and the discovery that the Rival was continually hanging about on the other side of the garden hedge waiting for the Girl's signal that the coast was clear encouraged Father.

"My dear Count," said Father, upon calling the Count's attention to it, "it gives me great joy to be able to announce officially your engagement to my daughter. You are, perhaps, a little slow in bringing her to the point — eh?"

"It shall be arranged immediately," said the Count. "Leave all to me."

It was early in the afternoon of a charming Summer day when Count Getrich called at Father's office in urban villa, determined to exert his fascination on the latter and carry the Girl by storm. The Girl received him with her accustomed distant courtesy.

The Count drew his chair close to the sofa on which the Girl had seated herself. He took both her hands and kissed them, rolling his eyes in ecstasy. The Girl withdrew her hands and rubbed the Count's kisses off on a sofa cushion.

"What! so cold?" protested Count Getrich. "Ah, but you little realize the delightful time that you have brought me here today. At last the time, the place and the charmer coincide. Sweet one, it is the Count Getrich who now offers you his hand, his heart and his fortune in marriage!"

"Oh, Count!" — the girl turned her face away. It was uncontrollable aversion. But Count Getrich, assured that she was overcome by he" sense of the great honor he had bestowed upon her, made a terrible blunder.

He leaned forward and kissed her. He was rewarded by a stinging slap in the face.

Then he found himself being literally driven from the house by the most flamingly righteous young woman in all his experience of the sex.

At the garden gate he twisted his mustache and turned to the right.

Over the hedge to the left of the gate his youthful Rival was being signalled by the Girl from the porch.

This Home-Made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You

Costs Little, but there is Nothing Better at any Price. Fully Guaranteed.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough almost instantly, and will usually conquer an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less. The recipe make a pint — enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-make cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste — children like it. It takes up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps break a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating bronchial asthma, bronchitis, spasmodic croup and whooping cough. This is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the recipe has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleaning at once.

When feverish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, can't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has sick headache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, undigested waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative," they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

ONE OF THE SCENES IN "WON BY A NOSE."

CHAPTER II.

Both of them on that same sofa. The Girl had her arms around the Rivals neck.

"Darling!" she murmured.

"Sweetheart!" said he, and kissed her passionately for the ninth time in less than a minute.

The Girl put her handkerchief to her face and sobbed.

"Oh, how I hate that dreadful Count Getrich!"

"Well fool him," said the Rival; "we'll elope." And he pulled the handkerchief away, intent upon a fair prospect of his tenth kiss.

He was not disappointed. Then she looked at her handkerchief and exclaimed:

"Oh, what a nose-bleed!"

It was true. The Rival's kisses had been emphatic and unerringly aimed. Two little scarlet streams were meandering down the Girl's face.

"It's all my fault," he said. "But there's a good old-fashioned remedy. Darling, may I put the donkey down your back? It's a certain cure for nose-bleed."

The Girl nodded, with her handkerchief to her nose.

He took the key from the door-lock and gently started it on its way down her spinal column. She shuddered hopefully.

But the famous old-fashioned remedy failed to work. The Girl's nose went on bleeding most alarmingly. The Rival became frightened.

"I'll go for the doctor," he said.

But the door was locked and the key was gone.

He kissed her on the ear and was off through a side window and over him and gave chase, cut was outdistanced, though persistent. A crowd of volunteers followed the policeman.

CHAPTER III.

Turning a street corner the perturbed Count Getrich bumped into Father.

"What! so soon?" said Father, prepared to hear good news.

"Sir, I am outraged!" stormed the Count. "To me it has never happened before — that is, not frequently. Your daughter slapped my face, sir, and drove me from your house — me, Count Getrich!"

Father's anger was terrible to behold. He took the Count by the noble elbow and turned him right about face.

"Count, I apologize. Come with me. We will see about this!"

Three minutes later they were at Father's door. The door would not open. Father knocked. No answer. He called out in his most terrifying paternal accents:

"Daughter, open the door this instant! I bring your future husband, Count Getrich!"

No answer. Father peered through the keyhole and fell back into the Count's arms.

"She's murdered," he gasped. "She lies on the sofa and her face is covered with blood!"

"Mon Dieu!" said the Count. "A doctor — some quickly!"

Their coattails flying, off ran Father and Count Getrich to bring a doctor.

Some women visitors came, knocked vainly, peeked through the keyhole — and ran for a doctor. Meeting the fat policeman and his running mates, they told them what they had seen, and they ran for a doctor.

Meanwhile, the Rival had collected the only available doctor and sprinted with him for Father's house and in through the side window.

The Girl, speedily yielding to medical treatment, excused herself for a minute and produced a doorkey, with the aid of which the doctor was able to leave decorously by the front door. As he turned to the left the policeman and his retinue, coming, hot-foot, from the opposite direction, did not meet him. The Rival, however, saw the policeman, and told the Girl.

"Now is the time to elope — now or never," he said.

"Oh, darling!" said she, and put on her hat.

When he had locked the door again and put the key on the mantel they departed discreetly through the side window and across lots in the direction of the nearest minister.

CHAPTER IV.

The policeman and his tireless running mates arrived from the east just as Father and Count Getrich sprinted up from the west. Father looked through the keyhole. No signs of the murdered Girl!

"Murder!" ejaculated the fat policeman. "Why didn't somebody say something about murder instead of yelling for a doctor?"

The indignant policeman rattled the doorknob. Just as he was about to drive one

FINDS NEW RADIUM RAY CANCER CURE

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The treatment of cancer with the gamma rays of radium is entirely wrong and the hitherto despised beta rays should be used. Dr. Robert Abbe, who has been experimenting with radium for eleven years, announced today he had made the discovery as the result of experiments conducted for him by Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

Dr. Abbe continued:

"I want to see what would happen on living tissues if the radium were applied so that only the beta rays could reach the tissue. Dr. Carrel took some living tissue from a chicken's leg two and a half years ago and put this tissue in a culture in which it remained alive.

"Dr. Carrel has been measuring its rate of growth since that time and has been clipping off bits of the new growth and starting them over in test tubes of their own.

"A powerful electro-magnet diverts the beta rays to one side and the alpha particles to the other side, leaving the gamma rays to flash straight out as if no magnet were present.

"I asked Dr. Carrel to put some of his living tissue in such a position near an electric magnet that only the beta rays could reach it. I asked him to place some of the tissue in such a position that only the gamma rays could reach it.

"I was surprised to find that the bit of tissue placed under the beta rays, which we thought of little or no value, actually showed great diminution of vitality. On the other hand, the tissue placed where only the gamma rays, which we had thought so dependable, could reach it showed scarcely any result."

Tramp Artist Makes Queen Pay Him $525

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Queen Mary, walking near Windsor Castle, saw a roughly clad man painting the portrait of a laborer's child. Admiring it and supposing him to be a "tramp artist," the Queen bade him come to her castle to paint Princess Mary's picture. She sent $5 to him. Then the painter revealed himself as a rising young portraitist and demanded his usual fee of $525, which Her Majesty paid roost reluctantly.

RECORD CROWD AT EASTERN DOG CLUB EXHIBIT

Another record crowd is expected to attend the third annual all-breed show of the Eastern Dog Club today in Mechanics building.

The show got away to a most impressive start and, in the number of dogs benched and the quality of the breeds, the event was a record breaker.

W. J. Nichols of London, who is judging all classes, spoke enthusiastically of the quality of the dogs. The best class he judged, in his opinion, was the Airedale terrier.

Tom Lawson's entry, especially Irish Boy, is the envy of all eyes. It is one of the biggest attractions at the show.

Among others is noted Mrs. George R. Thomas of Hamilton, well known as an authority on canines, especially Pomeranians. Mrs. Thomas has a special exhibit in her Enclifte Swastika, a Pomeranian of note.

No doubt the two dogs that attracted the most attention were the wire-haired fox terriers of George E. Quinard of New York, who won prizes with Rabby Dazzler and Matford Vic. This was the first time they had been shown in America and it is the opinion of experts that they are the best specimens of the breed ever imported.

The lost named dog was not in her best form but she won comfortably from Vickery Estelle, the dog that was last year awarded the special for the best of all breeds in the Boston show. Mr. Quintard was also successful with his Pomeranian, Ridgeway Smasher, who won handily from Mrs. J. L. Pultz's Mt. Julian.

Among cocker spaniels the Midcliff Kennels of Dallas, Pa., cleaned up practically everything. They went straight through with the black dog Hermit and the bitch Now or Never went through her classes and afterwards was awarded a special for the best stunned in the show.

There was considerable speculation and the keenest of interest manifested in the meeting between Vickery Emperor, owned by the Vickery Kennels, and His Highness, owned by A. Albright. These dogs are father and son. His Highness was recently adjudged best dog in the Newark show but he had to lower his colors yesterday to Emperor.

When the Stomach Goes Back to Work

Then Is the Whole System Glad. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Quickly Put the Stomach in Shape.

When the stomach fails to do its work properly the whole machine of man is unstrung and wholly incapable of work. This condition obtains from the tiniest nerve to the big, strong, pumping heart.

It is a wise law of nature that has made the stomach man's strongest organ, but when it shows signs man ought to realize that it does so because it can continue no longer.

"Hooray! Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Are the Real Appetite Bringers."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will set things right. The stomach the repair it needs and is always crying about for.

A tablet taken after each meal will do the curse of several hours' business a portion of the digestive duties. It will build up those lands. First in the stomach, then in the intestines.

The liver is the storehouse of the body. Here are assembled all the reserve fields of the organs and here the various ingredients of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mingle with the fluids and juices and strengthen them so that they are too strong then they will be reduced to their proper strength and proportion.

TWO SUSPECTS HELD FOR DEATH AT WATERTOWN

Two Armenians were arrested in the Watertown police station last night on suspicion in connection with the murder of Aroosiag Sarkisian, whose body with the head almost severed, was found in a ditch on the Fresh Pond road, Cambridge, Monday.

The police say that Sarkisian and a fellow Armenian, Mardiros Agassian, had been with him at a rooming house in Cambridge, and that they left the house together. Both were seen walking along the road where the murder was committed and not seen returning. Tracks showed that the two pursued and not overtook their victim. A search of the clothing revealed 70 cents and no watch. Agassian had a watch and $2 in money. Agassian, who is employed at the Arlington woolen mill, Watertown, denies that he gave the watch to Sarkisian, and says he had had it in his possession for a long time.

Reducing The High Cost Of Doing Business

WILLYS-UTILITY trucks effect economy both ways. They increase the volume of business by extending your delivery operations at 50% to 60% less cost per mile than horses.

And—

They lessen the cost of hauling goods in your present working radius by reducing horse cost from 30% to 40%.

Hauling costs, by necessity, must vary in different localities but no matter what your local conditions might be, if you haul merchandise the installation of Willys-Utility Trucks will reduce your present cost of doing business and at the same time show a handsome increase in the volume.

"Give us some specific cases and facts?"—you ask.

Below are a few of thousands:

Willys Utility Truck

Three-Quarter Ton $1350

(Chassis Only)
f. o. b. Toledo, Ohio.

Longwell's Transfer Company of El Paso, Texas, states:

"One of the Willys trucks has been in service since early in August of this year, and the other was put into service shortly thereafter. These two trucks are doing the work formerly performed by twelve horses, and they are covering from thirty to sixty miles a day. I am amazed at the low cost of upkeep, and believe long experience will have five Utility trucks in service."

Mr. Jacob Piper, (Grocery and Meat Business) of Lima, Ohio, states:

"While the Willys-Utility Truck was purchased purely from the viewpoint of business increase it has in connection with another older truck, which will be supplanted by a new Willys-Utility as soon as you have completed the body, taken the place of five horses and three men.

"The truck has proven a profitable investment in every sense of the word. Business has increased during this time 25% owing principally to the extended delivery radius and prompt service our old and new customers now enjoy.

"Our truck makes from five to six trips a day, averaging 200 stops, the total daily mileage being from 45 to 50 miles. It is also possible with this equipment for us to carry business from several state institutions that are located about three miles from the city limits, the truck making the round trip and delivery within 45 minutes each case.

The Cleveland News of Cleveland, Ohio, states:

"The Willys-Utility truck makes a run every morning to Akron loaded with from twelve to seventeen hundred pounds of Cleveland Leaders and returns empty. This is a round trip of eighty miles, ten miles of which is over very bad roads. Besides this the truck makes a run in the city of Cleveland, in the afternoon on our baseball edition, which I should say was in the neighborhood of twenty-five miles.

"The cost of operation has been surprisingly small compared with other trucks we used on the run.

"The Brown Auto-Carriage Company of Cleveland, states:

"I desire to tell you what I think of the 'Willys-Utility' truck.

"We left our farm which is sixteen miles from the square at 5 o'clock in the morning with 60 bushels of tomatoes, 10 of peppers, and 11 dozen egg plants, and were at the market at 6:15. We then unloaded and went to Brest, where we picked up our pickers and were back to the farm at 7:30. The same night our two horses again left the farm at 2 o'clock in the morning, and did not get back to the farm until 12 o'clock. We cannot see how we ever got along without the truck. It could not be repaired, we would not sell it for five times what we paid."

The Aurora Company, manufacturers of Texas Awnings, etc., of Cleveland, states:

"We wish at this time to express our satisfaction derived from the Willys-Utility Truck that we purchased from you recently. This truck has now been in service a short time and we have found it very beneficial in many ways, as it now does the work of more than five horses, and in one instance in the last few days it made from long distance trips whereas one of our wagons only made one.

It is very economical to keep up our truck as we find the actual expense of oil and gasoline is about $6.00 per week, although the truck is used in our business the truck is only in motion about one-half of the time on our regular run of work.

Now don't you make the expensive mistake of saying—"That's all very well but my business is different."

Your business is not different. The very men who made the above statements at first said their business was different. But we proved to them that it wasn't. The above letters are the answer.

After listening to our facts—after weighing our arguments pro and con, you will also be convinced and your conviction will result in saving you a lot of real money and valuable time.

What Willys-Utility trucks have done for thousands they will do for you.

"Phone our local representative for an appointment now.

RUNYON HEADS OFF BALL STARS IN GAY PAREE

Damon Runyon, famous baseball narrator and humorist of the AMERICAN, braved the storms of the Atlantic to catch up with the wandering Giants and While Sox. Runyon planned to tramp into the globe circlers in Paris, and, as he never fails when out anything, it took in the gay city that he shackled over the tourists.

In the following article Runyon tells what the players are doing to get away from home. Runyon will stick with the aggregations until they disembark at Boston, and he advises you to read the AMERICAN every day if you want to keep in touch with the way band of travelers.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—Covered all over with foreign labels and all chatty as a beau like Bardekers, the Giants-White Sox party early yesterday afternoon shot into the sedate little village but eight with the iron and determined intention of having a fling at fleshlights standing. Slightly in the rear of this advance guard, but nothing daunted by his slow progress, came one gentleman known the world over as Harry Sparrow, John McGraw's traveling audience, and also first member of Jawn's kitchen cabinet. Harry was pulling under an attack of la grippe and a trunk baggage of $2,000, representing the profits of the trip to date.

COMISKEY BACK WITH FLOURISH.

Monsignor McGraw was here in advance of the party, and in his entourage was little Ted Sloan, who rode the gallant steed in the days before Charles E. Hughes studied somethings and made Bill Klem, who in never here with the intention of making Carmen look like a movie picture tenor.

Needless to mention, Jawn has by force compelled Santa Claus to stand him during his stay on the Seine.

Charles Comiskey who owns the White Sox among other things, is in so among those present, feeling much improved but still a sick man thank you. The "old Roman" is going to stick around and will make the return trip with the team.

George Kessler, who firmly believes in champagne tan he sells it for a living, is going to stick with the bunch during the stay, feeding them regular food with the bubbles on the side.

THORPE ONE OF THE STARS.

The regular dinners will strike Mike Donlin as being somewhat "recherche," for it will give the noble Spartan an opportunity to wear his full dress which Mike thinks, and is just like a tuxedo except the coat has long tails. The events will never be forgotten by Michael Donlin, no.

Jim Thorpe, the boroom friend of the King of Sweden, gave a great exhibition of throwing the javelin at Nice yesterday. When the party reached this spot, Jim will give the citizens a chance to watch him toss the bull.

Vive la France.

GAMES TONIGHT.

Quebec at Ottawa.
Wanderers vs. Canadiens.
Toronto at Ontarios.

THE CANADIANS AND TORONTO STILL seem to be the best teams in the National Hockey Association and it looks as though Ottawa would have to step aside for one of them to get into the running for the championship. Quebec is in the hunt for the present, but it is hardly likely that the Wanderers and Ontarios will be in the running for the championship. Both of them have been weakened by the loss of players and a win will be a big surprise to the followers of the clubs in Montreal and Toronto.

BUT FIVE MORE GAMES REMAIN TO be played in the league, and it is not a hilly task for the Canadiens or Toronto to win from Ottawa. The Canadiens have been playing consistent hockey lately and should be able to take care of the Ottawa team.

COMING TO THE HOME STRETCH with only five more games to be played, the league looks to be a very interesting one. The battle between Toronto and Ottawa for the championship is going to be a hot one.

SIDNEY LALONDE HAS GIVEN A DISappointing performance in the National Hockey Association this season. Lalonde is a star of the first magnitude, and it is a shame that he has not been able to show his real form. Lalonde has been handicapped by the loss of Newsy Lalonde, who is playing with the Canadiens, and Joe Hall, who was killed in the battle of the Somme. Lalonde has been unable to find a mate to work with, and as a result has been unable to show his real form. YOU COULD HARDLY BELIEVE IT, COULD YOU?

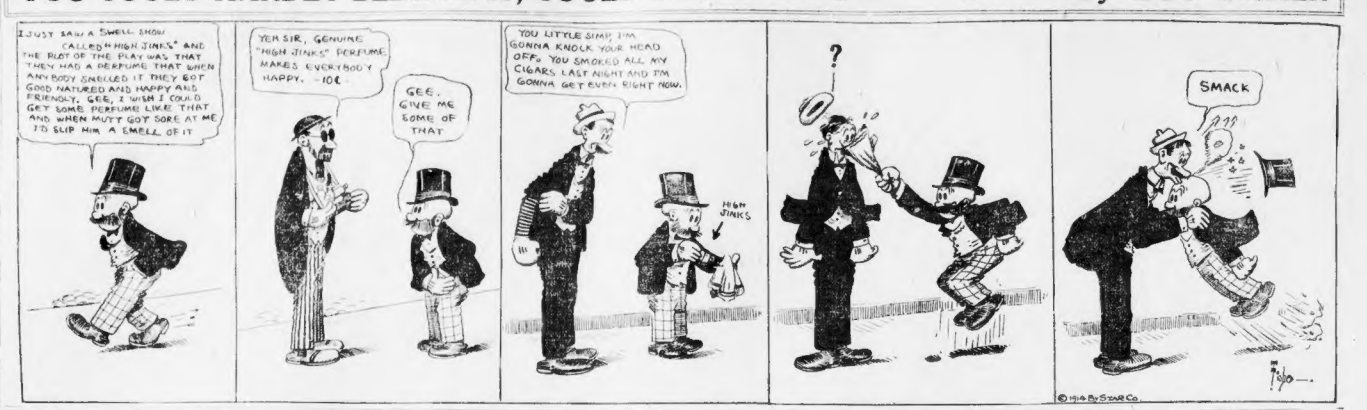
By "BUD" FISHER



In this installment of the Ty Cobb stories, written for the Boston AMERICAN, "the greatest baseball player of them all resumes his discussion of the umpires.

I'mpire Billy Evans and I have had several jams over plays. He tells the story of how I put one over on him in Detroit one day when I had an engagement to go to an early dinner in the country club outside of town. The Tigers had cinched the pennant late in the season of 1909, and the game was an unimportant one and could make no difference to my club. It dragged out to an hour and a half, and only six innings had been completed.

I saw I would never be able to keep my dinner engagement unless I got put out of the game. I began to kick on every play, but Evans, being in a good humor, refused to get sore. Finally, I came to bat in the seventh inning. One cut I the plate.

"Strike!" said Evans.

I tossed my bat and bat into the air and held my hands a yard apart to show him how big and how much off the plate I considered the ball to be. "This was an unpardonable sin, as I was showing the umpire up before the crowd, something none of the "umps" will stand for.

"What's the matter, Ty?" asked Evans. "That was good ball. What are you trying to show me up for?"

"That one was a yard off the plate," I said, and again I stretched out my hands to show him.

Evans Put Him Out of the Game.

"Get out of the game and beat it," replied Evans.

I hurled my bat at the pile in front of the bench and sprinted for the clubhouse. Schaefer, who has been coaching at first base, came in toward the plate when I made my kick and heard it all. As soon as I had been put out of the game he said to Evans.

"That's just what Cobb wanted. He had a dinner date and was afraid of being late."

By this time I had reached second base in my hurried journey to the club house.

"Come back here and get into the game," bawled Evans after me.

But I could not hear him and just kept right on going. I kept up my harangument. The next day the umpire came to see me.

"Got any early dates for this afternoon, Ty?" Because, if you have, cancel them. You could not blow yourself out of this game today with a freight car full of strongly-worse.

"No, I'll play ball today," I says my so," I replied, "but I'm much obliged to you for letting me off early yesterday."

I got into a more serious jam with Evans earlier in my baseball days. I had not been hitting well for a week and was sore and peeved over it. At that time I would permit my temper to flare up instantly, and I would say things that I would not now. Twice I had gone to the bat that day and had failed to hit safe. The third time Evans called a strike on me that looked low, and I thought he was putting me in the hole and during my average.

I threw down my bat and began to bark at him. He paid no attention, but got the whisk broom and began to clean off the plate. Still I talked. I threw my cap into the air when he had finally completed the job of cleaning off the plate and looked at me again. He could not miss the strike.

"Get out of the game," he said.

"I'll knock your block off for this," I challenged, having lost all sense by now.

"Get here, Ty," replied Evans, who has great control over his temper, as an umpire must. "That come around to my dressing room after the game and we'll settle it."

After my shower I cooled off and was sorry for what I had said. As soon as the game was over I hurried around to the umpire's dressing room to square it with Evans.

"Hello, Ty," he said. "Did you call to battle?"

"I will if you want me to" I replied, "but what are you always picking on me for, Bill? I'm sorry I talked and acted the way I did out there today, but you called a bad one on me."

"We all of us bust one once in awhile," replied Evans, and that was the end of it.

Nobody can or ever does tell a story about umpires without one last fling at "Tim" Hurst. Years ago, try with a show called the "Runaway Colt," in which was a baseball scene which called for an umpire. In the various cities where the production was put on, some baseball celebrity was selected to act as the umpire in this scene.

When it came to New York, they, of course, dug up "Tim." "Artie" Latham was in the show at the time and sprinted for the club house. Schaefer, who has been coaching at first base, came in toward the plate when I made my kick and heard it all. As soon as I had been put out of the game he said to Evans.

"That's just what Cobb wanted. He had a dinner date and was afraid of being late."

YALE HAS NEW ROWING PLANS FOR HARVARD

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 18.—Yale is anxious to have Harvard drop the annual four-oar race at New London, and that in place thereof be substituted a race between the second varsity eights of the two universities.

Richard Armstrong, Yale's new graduate rowing manager, is in favor of this change, and a conference is to be held in the near future to discuss this proposition with Harvard.

Yale now believes that the change should be made in order to interest more men in varsity rowing, and also becomes an eight-oar race is a better contest than a four-oar.

The board of stewards of the Poughkeepsie Regatta recently passed a resolution which does away with the four-oar university race. In commenting on this action, Mr. Armstrong says:

"The stewards have shown great judgment in abandoning the four-oar university race. It was not of great interest and had a considerable element of danger attached to it. Furthermore, by adopting eights it enables a great many more men to win places in the boats, which is in itself a very desirable thing."

M'CARTHY AND GALLANT MEET ON THE COAST

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Gilbert Gallant vs. Jack McCarthy at San Francisco.
Johnny "Kid" Alberts vs. "Young" Jasper, Frankie Mack vs. "Young" Lloyd, "Young" Raymond vs. Steve Lagney at Webster.
"Young" Dyson vs. Mickey Devine, Providence.

By JACK CONWAY.

GILBERT GALLANT will engage in his second ring battle on the Pacific Coast when he clashes with Jack McCarthy in a twenty-round tussle in San Francisco this evening. The Chelsea lightweight has become acclimated and is sure to carry McCarthy along at a merry pace.

New England boxing "fans" are rooting for Gallant to win tonight as he is one of the most promising glove wielders developed in this section of the country during the past few years and has won countless admirers by his quiet, unassuming manners.

Gallant started on his Western campaign early in January when he defeated Jess Hogan in a twenty-round encounter in Salt Lake City. He was then signed to clash with Frankie Burns of California in San Francisco and he earned a draw.

GALLANT made a grand showing in his whirl with Burns. W. W. Naughton, dean of American boxing writers, declared that the Chelsea boy's aggressive tactics and gameness made a big fight with the "fans." He also asserted that Gallant might have gained the decision if he had not received an injury to one of his eyes while preparing for the quarrel.

MCCARTHY is a veteran of the ring and is sure to make things interesting for Gallant. He fought a twenty-round draw with Matty Baldwin in August, 1911, which proved that he is a good performer. After being held to a draw by McCarthy, Baldwin won from Willie Ritchie, the present lightweight champion, in a twenty-round contest in San Francisco. McCarthy was the only prominent lightweight on the Coast who would agree to meet Gallant. The other young men who declare in Grecian eloquence that they are candidates for the lightweight championship prefer to watch Gallant box from ringside seats.

THERE will be an all-star boxing show before the Lakeside A. C. in Webster tonight. Johnny "Kid" Alberts will clash with "Young" Jasper in the feature bout of twelve rounds, while Frankie Mack will entertain "Young" Lloyd in a ten-round contest. There will also be an eight-round preliminary bout between "Young" Raymond and Steve Bigney.

GEORGE ALGER, the Cambridge lightweight, has been matched to clash with Andy Cuzzy of Brooklyn in a ten-round bout to be decided in Turners Falls tomorrow night. Alger recently defeated "Kayo" Sweeney in Manchester, N. H., and believes that he will win from Cuzzy.

"YOUNG" TOGO, the Japanese boxer who once gave our old friend and college chum, Oscar Battling Maloney Nelson such a hard battle, may be signed to meet Ah Chung, the Chinese boxer, at a St. Louis club. The contest would be for the Oriental title and would be something of a novelty for the "fans" of the Missouri city.

Boxing Results.

Hot Springs—Jack Britton defeated Marshall Claiborne, 2 rounds; Johnny Anwieler and Bobby McCord drew, six rounds.
New York—Jack Britton defeated Gene Moriarity, seven rounds.
Buffalo—Charlie White knocked out Kid Kansas, 3 rounds; George Cohen and Harry Baker drew.
Philadelphia—Louisana beat Harry Smith.
Jackson—Paul Sikora and Tommy Dwyla, draw, ten rounds.
Providence—Patsy Delucca and Silent Martin, draw; Dave Powers beat Bert Smalley.

Melrose Beats Milton.
Melrose High hockey team defeated Milton Academy, 5 to 3, at Milton.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS
By A. H. C. Mitchell

JOHNNY EVERS, about whom the baseball pot boiled all last week, and is still boiling, is on his way to Boston. The former manager of the Cubs, who was let out in such low-down fashion by Charles Webb Murphy, has found a safe harbor in which to cast anchor. From now until the time when he shall have outlived his baseball usefulness—which we all hope will be many years hence—he will wear the uniform of the Braves, do his best and show the loyal patrons of the nation's game there in Boston that he is beyond question the greatest second baseman in the National League.

AFTER a short stay in Boston, Evers will return to his home in Troy, N. Y., and in a few days pack his trunk and start for Macon, Ga., where he and his new teammates are to train for the coming season.

Evers was a big league manager last year. He is now a private in the baseball ranks. Sometimes changes in positions like this do not work well, but in the case of Evers, he will undoubtedly forget that he was ever a manager and strive his utmost to win ball games for the Boston team under the direction of George Stallings.

WITH Evers, on the way to Boston, are James E. Gaffney, owner of the club, and George Stallings, the manager. They are the big three of the organization. They are coming here together so that the Boston fans may have a chance to see Evers as a class hand. There are one or two things that will require the attention of Gaffney and Stallings at the club offices, but for the most part the arrangements for the Spring training trip have already been made by Secretary Nickerson.

THERE seems to be an ominous lull in the atmosphere that drifts "Cub" Murphy out of baseball. War has been declared, and no doubt Ban Johnson, who is the self-constituted leader of the campaign, is busy marshaling his forces preparatory to an assault on the Murphy breastworks.

What the public would like to know is how they intend to drive the talkative Chicago magnate out of the game. It is good betting that Ban Johnson lands his man. When he goes gunning after anyone he usually brings down the man he shoots at.

No matter what happens, Murphy is up against it. He seems to realize the fact, for he hasn't opened his mouth since Sunday. When Murphy isn't talking it is a proof positive that he is worried.

THREE times in the past sixteen months Murphy has stepped into the limelight and gummed things up. His first bad break was when he canned Frank Chance at the close of the season of 1912. For this act he was panned from one end of the country to the other by the baseball public.

Next he became involved with Fogel in casting aspersions on the honesty of the National League president and his umpires. The National League had a fine chance to rid itself of Murphy when it tied a can to Fogel, but let the opportunity slip by.

The reason, of course, was that Fogel had nothing, and all that was necessary was to kiss Horace good-bye and let it go at that. But Murphy owned a ball club and had money in the bank. It was more difficult to can him, so the league let him down with a sharp reprimand.

The third case was last week, when he fired Evers as manager and played right into the hands of the Federal League.

HAD it not been for the war with the Federal League, Murphy might have gotten away with the raw deal he handed Evers. It was not until Evers talked right out in meeting and announced that he would bolt to the Feds unless he received satisfaction that the National League took up his case seriously.

TECH ATHLETES SELECTED FOR ARMORY GAMES

The Technology short and long distance relay teams which are to run against Harvard at the Providence Armory games next Saturday night have been picked by Coach Kanaly of the varsity track team.

C. Fox, '14, and T. H. Guething, '14, the varsity team captain, are members of both squads and will run next Saturday in the event which precedes on the program.

The showing of H. S. Benson, '16, the cross-country runner in the trials, was a decided surprise, as he has been having a great deal of foot trouble since the outdoor season ended.

Mabel Herbert Urner's Great Series:

Their Married Life

They Have a Cheerless Trip to a Suburban Town on a Dismal Rainy Night.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"LOOK, dear, isn't that a restaurant over there?"

Warren shifted the dripping umbrella and peered across the dimly lit, rain-driven village street.

"Dairy luncheroom," in a tone of disgust, as he caught a glimpse of the cash register and marble-topped tables through the glass door. "We were driveling idiots not to eat before we started. Stand a mighty slim chance of getting anything around here."

But whatever the discomforts of the dinner and evening, Helen felt free from all blame, for Warren had planned this trip.

Several weeks before he had said not to make any engagement for the 15th, as they were going up to Blankford to see Jack Maxwell in an amateur play. It was no untice Warren to attend an affair of this kind that Helen had not taken it seriously. But that morning at breakfast he told her to meet him at 5:30; that they would take an early train and eat dinner at Blankford.

"We'll not go if it rains," protested Helen, looking at the gray, threatening sky.

"Rain? Think I'd let a little rain keep me from seeing 'Max' make a fool of himself? Not much."

But now, as they splashed through the dark, rain-swirled streets, with the prospect of a dairy luncheroom dinner, Warren's ardor was dampened.

"There' that's more like it," as now two signs, "Blankford House Grill" and "Cafe" shone out cheerfully ahead. "We can at least get something to drink there."

HELEN GLEEFUL

Oh, it's an old-fashioned country hotel," exclaimed Helen, gleefully, as they went up the steps. "Just the kind of a place I hoped we'd find."

It was an old frame house, built on Colonial lines, and the wide centre hall was used as an office.

A man, evidently the proprietor, pleased at having guests on so rainy a night, came from behind the desk with a hospitable "good evening."

Can you give us something to eat?" asked Warren, ramming his dripping umbrella into a stand by the door.

"Yes sir, certainly," leading them into the dining room, which was empty and dark except for a single gas jet. Hastily he lit up the centre chandelier and turned to Warren with an apologetic, "It's a little late for our regular supper, sir, but we can give you anything you want."

"What have you got that's good?" for Warren knew that "whatever you want" in a village hotel meant a choice of but two or three things.

"Nice sirloin steak, sir, or we can broil you a chicken."

Warren ordered a steak and French fried potatoes, his standard order when in doubt about the culinary resources of a place.

Helen, always interested in the atmosphere of rooms and places, was absorbed in "looking around."

The wall paper was a cheerful flowered red and white, the floor was covered with linoleum and a dingy red carpet. Over the mantel hung some colored coaching and hunting scenes.

"Haven't any too much time—that snow's supposed to begin at 8:15. Hope they'll hurry along that steak," as Warren drained his cocktail.

Helen had been making futile efforts to "fix" her hair, which was almost down from the constant jogging of Warren's umbrella against her hat. As they were alone in the dining room, she now went over to the mantel mirror, but found that her pocket comb was not in her handbag.

"Oh, I've lost my comb—what shall I do? I can't go to that place with my hair like this!"

"Now never mind the primping—here comes the steak!"

Helen went back to the table with the uncomfortable feeling a woman always has when her hair is loose and no re-thrusting of hairpins will help.

"How's that?" demanded Warren, who had carved into the steak and now held up a piece with critical approval. "Pretty good sirloin, eh? Done enough for you?"

"Oh, yes; plenty."

POTATOES GOOD

The potatoes were not the ordinary soggy "French friend," but were browned to a golden ture, smoking hot and deliciously mealy inside.

"Knew we'd get good plain food here," declared Warren with satisfaction. "Never order any fancy stuff at a place like this."

Their table was by a window, and now through the rain-blurred glass Helen saw the colored lights of a drug store across the street.

"Dear, I know they have combs over there. When we're through, can't you run over and get me one?" pleadingly. "It won't take a minute."

"Now we've got no time to fool. Shove your hair up under your hat Who's going to notice you, anyway?"

"But I'll have to take my hat off, won't I?"

"How do I know?" with a shrug. "I've never been to one of these church shows. But I'd go anywhere to see Max try to act. They've been rehearsing this dope for about six months. He's been spouting about it ever since—the 'to be or not to was' style."

"To be or not to was!" laughed Helen. "I never heard that before. But I didn't know it was a Shakespearian play."

"It's not. But he's got an idea he can act, and he's studying on the side. That's the joke—he really THINKS he can act. Ha! Ha!" Warren threw back his head with his deep laugh. "Maxwell's a mighty fine fellow—but ACT! Oh, say, it's going to be rich!"

The waitress came up now with solicitous inquiry.

"No, I guess that's about all we'll have time for. You bring the check. How about tipping her?" as she disappeared. Shall I risk it? She looks to me like the proprietor's wife."

But Helen was much too worried about her hair to be concerned about the status of the waitress.

HELEN SEEKS RELIEF

"Dear, I'm going to run over to that drug store for a comb. I'll be back before you get the change."

Unheeding the protest Warren roared after her, Helen darted out through the office and across the street. She had not waited to take the umbrella, but the rain had slackened some.

The drug clerk, who was weighing out cough drops, looked up in mild surprise as she entered with a breathless:

"A comb! Any kind of a pocket comb."

The next moment she had the comb, a cheap ten-cent one in a leatherette case, and was darting back.

"Have you a dressing room here?" she asked of the waitress who was now making change from the cash drawer in the office.

"Yes, ma'am, right up the stairs to your left."

The first door was ajar and Helen pushed it open. But it was a bedroom, a country hotel bedroom with the musty odor that comes from such a room, shut up on a rainy night. Across the hall was a sort of parlor with cheap upholstered furniture, and further on was the dressing room.

Before the small cracked mirror which hung over an unvarnished table, she quickly took down her hair, braided and coiled it securely. Then with a feeling of immense relief that she could now enjoy the evening, she hurried down.

Warren, already in his overcoat, was waiting with a savage scowl.

"Know what time it is? Ten after eight! You never go anywhere that you're not everlasting powdering and fixing up! It's your blamed conceit. Think everybody'll be looking at you instead of the stage, do you?"

"Why, dear," startled Helen unhappily, "my hair was all down—"

The proprietor, who had directed Warren how to reach the church where the play was being given, now followed them out on the dripping porch with a final:

"Three blocks straight ahead and then to the left."

At the first crossing, with a splash, Helen stepped into a puddle.

"Look where you put your feet," growled Warren.

Then as she glanced down at her spattered skirt, she stopped short with a dismayed:

"Oh!"

"Now what's the matter?"

ANOTHER MISHAP

"Oh, nothing, only I—I must have left my overshoes under the table. But it doesn't matter," hastily, "they're old ones—and these shoes are heavy."

Without a word Warren switched her around, and in grim silence marched her back to the hotel. At the gate she broke away from him and ran ahead, through the office and into the dining room, where her rubber shoes were still under the table.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she sighed, him breathlessly. But we won't be late if we hurry, will we? These things never begin on time."

Without deigning an answer, Warren strode on so fast that Helen had almost to run to keep under the umbrella. One of her overshoes was loose, and when she stopped to stamp it on, he jerked his arm away and stalked on ahead.

She caught up with him, but her overshoe was still loose, and as they crossed the street it came off in the mud.

"What the devil's the matter NOW?" savagely, as she turned to look for it.

"One of my overshoes came off," falteringly. "But we won't stop to look for it."

"No, by George, we WON'T. You've done about enough to queer this evening. Now come on!"

Look What's Coming! By Nell Brinkley

(So Says Madam Fashion)

No. 1.—The pretty hair fashion now.

No. 2.—And what fashion is going to wish on us.

MADAME FASHION is a compelling and wicked little Parisian woman who sits on the Mountain of Curious Things and all day long is busy confounding the world of women, saying: "You shall wear this—and now you shall wear that! Yesterday I gave you crinoline—today you shall aatly rout in a slip of cloth—tomorrow I shall give you both crinoline and the mummy shirt—and you shall look like a beautiful humming top or a half closed umbrella—so you shall!" And so on de—by goodness! If you are a man with lots of women folks, you'll know—if you read the newspaper and listen with one ear at the little earnest strands of talk that drift between em—that girl-and-women folk never mean to wear strange and queer things—no. Long ago before balloon sleeves came in (and some times they were plaid!), when the rumor of them came whispering from the place where Madame Fashion amused herself with her toys my mother sank nodding her sleepy brown head, "I'll never wear a big sleeve." And my mum and I, leaning solemnly over her sewing machine, echoed, "Neither will we!" Yet in my studio leans a queer little photograph of my mum, her brown curls ringing loose on the shoulders of great PLAID sleeves—mountainous, generous, overwhelming, stiffended—I remember how they crackled, giving her the look of a little brown bug trying to hold down two toy balloons. The three of us had them.

Now that Madame Invention has dealt out to us for so seventeen a time—the sleeve that follows so beautifully the shoulder line—the blouse with its two seams falling naturally to the line of body underneath—the loose girdle that is no smaller now than the girth very own waist—something is going to happen, so they say—and one dreadful word is "BUSTLE." Madame Fashion is like "Once your little rich girl," she tires soon of every toy—and when the toy happens to be one we like and beautiful, it doesn't make any "differ" she drags us away from it on to the next—even if it is to a bustle. No woman wants to wear a bustle and crinoline—and they're revelling and wriggling about with pleasure in the loose waist seams, but the wicked little wench Dame Parse is yawning and turning her nimble wits over and over, for something new—and out of it comes some grotesque and uncouly revivings—dyed wigs in blue and green and purple (the colors never always let the merfolks keep their water-wet locks)—crinoline pantalettes (truth—me is fonnes has already stepped the streets with them)—the BUSTLE—(hooves) and heard the women creatures at your house lately say they'll wear one of 'em!—and now this wonderful way of the hair—our own hair—but hair—ruffles and comfortable and mighty pretty hair—will go along with all the other good things in the limbo of fairy tales and Santa Claus and here is its excellent! Look at it. It'll be pretty on the petulant girl in the world—but the just girl will seem kind of mussed at first—will record you of her unfrequent and good nights! But that isn't all! Even if it isn't worth it—it looks possible—but it isn't. With it came back the things to build her hair over—heavy things—and if it's a mat tress—like lots of hair—disgusting

Oh, Madame Fashion, little wicked person—why don't you leave our hair in this delightful way? It's pretty as—as—as! But fashions now have shaped to our head, it's a pretty way girls have of dressing their hair for the last year, I'm thinking.

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL

FOURTH PART

I FALL IN LOVE

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1912, by Hearst Magazine, Limited, in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. K. Leppendt Company.

Then Mr. Eastcliff would say that it was a ridiculous superstition that a woman should have her husband all to herself, "as if he were a kind of toothbrush which she could not share with anybody else," and somebody would add that she might as reasonably want her dentist or her hairdresser to be kept for her own use only.

After that the ladies, not to be left behind, would join in the offhand rattle, and one of them would give it as her opinion that a wife might have an incorrigibly unfaithful husband, and yet be well off.

"Ugh!" said Alma one night, shrugging her shoulders. "Think of a poor woman being tied for life to an entirely faithful husband!"

"I adore the kind of a man who goes to the deuce for a woman—Tarnell, and Gambetta and Boulanger and that sort," said a "smart" girl of three or four-and-twenty, whereupon Camilla Eastcliff (she was a Russian) cried:

"That's why the co-respondents in your divorce courts are so charming. they're like the villagns in the plays —always so dee-lightfully wicked."

Oh, the sickening horror of it all! Whether it was really moral corruption or only affectation and pose, it seemed equally shocking, and though I bore as much of it as I could with a cheerful face, I escaped as often as possible to the clean atmosphere of my own room.

But even there I was not always allowed to be alone, for Alma's mother frequently followed me. She was a plump little person in a profuse ornamentation of diamonds—diamond rings and brooches, with little or no education, and a reputation for anything risky (Alma in blundering French whereof the principal humor lay in the uncertainty as to whether she knew their meaning or not.

Nevertheless she was the only good-hearted woman in the house, and I really believe she thought she was doing a kind act in keeping me company. But oh, how I suffered from her long accounts of her former "visits" to my house, whereby I learned, without wishing to, what her origin had been (the daughter of a London postman); what position she had held in Castle Rag in her winsome and reckless youth (one that need not be defined), how she had met her husband in New York and he had married her in spite of the reputation of his child; and finally how the American ladies of society had refused to receive her and she had vowed to be revenged on them by marrying Alma to the highest title in Europe that could be bought with money.

"I was just like your father, my dear. I cared no more for society than counts of the far-reaching sort of his expedition—the engaging of engineers, electricians, geologists and masons, and the shipping of great stores of wireless apparatus—for his spirits seemed to be high, and life was full of good things for him.

His second letter told me that everything was finished, and he was to visit the island the next week, going first to "the old folks" and coming to me for a few days immediately before setting sail.

That brought matters to a head, and compelled me to take action.

It may have been weak of me, but not wanting a repetition of the scene with Father Dan (knowing well that Martin would not bear it with the same patience), I sent the second letter to Alma, asking if the arrangement would be agreeable. She returned it with the endorsement scribbled in pencil across the face, "certainly, anything to please your dear."

I submitted even to that. Perhaps I was a poor-spirited thing, wanting in proper pride, but I had a feeling that it was not worth while to waste myself in little squibs of temper, because an eruption was coming (I was sure of that) in which Martin would be concerned on my side, and then everything and everything would be swept out of the path of my life for ever.

Martin came. In due courses I read in the insular newspapers of his arrival on the island—how the people had turned out in crowds to cheer him at the pier, and now, on reaching our own village the neighbors all knew the names of all of them had met him at the railway station and taken him to the mother's house, and then lighted fires on the mountains to bring relatives to see him.

It cut me to the heart's core to think of Martin amid thrilling scenes like these, while I was leading a degrading scenes like these. My love for Martin was now like a wound and I felt as if nothing could heal it. Before he reached Castle Rag I should liberate myself from the fetters of my false position.

Father Dan's counsels had failed away by this time. Though I had prayed for strength to bear my burden there had been no result, and one morning, standing before the figure of the Virgin in my bedroom, I felt an impulse to blow out her lamp and never to light it again.

The end of it all was that I determined to see the Bishop and my father's advocate, Mr. Curphy, and perhaps my father himself, that I might know one way or the other what I was to do, and what was to become of me.

Fortune—ill-fortune—favored me. News came that my father had suddenly fallen ill of some ailment that puzzled the doctors, and making this my reason and asking I spoke to my husband, asking if I might go home for two or three days.

An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

FORBES SEES APEX OF MONEY RATE ADVANCE

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

It takes courage, but, after giving the matter mature study, I am willing to go on record with this statement—sure to be widely derided:

I believe the world has seen the apex of the advance in the price of capital that has been going on for more than a decade, and that there will now set in a very gradual downward movement destined to last several years.

The change in the income yield obtainable on the best investments is not likely to be appreciable for several months, owing to the abnormal governmental borrowing contemplated and the large and heavy corporate demand impending here, but, in the absence of any great war, the recession should have made considerable headway before 1915 has passed.

That interest rates will not continue to soar as in the case of the last four years is, to my mind, a matter permitting of no doubt.

This subject is of vital importance, not less to the man who has only the small investor and to the business man, than to the financier, and in order to obtain data pertaining to it I purpose to gather and present the views of our leading banking and economic authorities.

The discussion cannot fail to be illuminating. It may afford valuable guidance for municipalities, railroads, industrial corporations, business men and others confronted with the question whether to pay the high rates now demanded for money and agree to pay it for long terms, or to make any temporary arrangements that may be necessary until funds can be obtained on long-date securities, on more attractive terms.

Investors of all classes, too, must be interested in trying to ascertain whether they can do better by buying securities carrying a fixed rate of income for many years, or by holding off for a still greater rise in the wages of capital.

* * *

Savings bank depositors will also be affected by the course money takes. Competition for funds forces rates first, and, consequently, the income derivable from investments, will higher, the banks will be able to continue paying at least 4 per cent. on deposits. On the other hand, borrowers can fill their needs on easier terms than heretofore, the income obtainable on safe standard investment will decline, and, as a consequence, the 4 per cent. payment on deposits will tend to fall to 3½ or even 3 per cent.

* * *

You see now, don't you, that the subject is not a purely academic one, possessing no concern for ordinary mortals?

I have already given my opinion—that the wages of capital will stop advancing and that the tendency from now on will be toward appreciably lower level, especially after the extraordinary Balkan demands have been filled.

* * *

Seeing that I have embarked on the perilous venture of making prophecies, I am tempted to emit one more—on a subject about which I am often asked to write:

* * *

I believe the cost of living has also reached the high-water mark, and that, if our crops and other crops are reasonably abundant this year, the trend will be downward within the next twelve months.

* * *

My reasons for reaching these conclusions must wait for presentation in another article.

* * *

The views of others of more weight will also be given on this subject of such vital moment to at least ninety millions of our nine-figure population.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were stronger this afternoon, the improvement being attributed to reports from Washington that the conference between President Wilson and Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clarke had caused the impression at the capital that there will be a decision on the plea of Eastern railroads for a 5 per cent. increase in freight rates before long. Trading had been dull in New York during the first hour, but it was on a larger scale thereafter. Quietude during noontime was followed by activity in the afternoon.

Afternoon gains in New York included General Electric 3¼, Canadian Pacific 2, Southern Pacific ¾, Missouri Pacific ¼, Reading ¾, Lehigh Valley 1¾, New Haven ¾, American Telephone ½, American Can ⅝, Steel ⅝, Amalgamated ¼, American Smelting ⅝, Northern Pacific ½, Baltimore & Ohio ½, Great Northern preferred ½, Union Pacific ¼, Pennsylvania ¼ and St. Paul 1¼.

Boston & Maine in Boston had been as low as 46 during the morning, but by afternoon had recovered to 48, then losing off a point. New Haven had recovered all loss and was up ¼. Other gains were American Telephone, 3½; Butte & Superior, 1; Calumet & Arizona, which declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share today, ½; Butte & Ballaklala, ¼; Shoe common ⅝; Granby, which had sold as low as 85, was up ¾ at 87¾. Electric Elevated was off a point, and United Fruit 1⅜. Mohawk was ¼ lower.

BETTER TONE AT START.

There was a better tone to the New York market at the start and some covering helped raise the average of prices. Within a few minutes there was further improvement, but the buying was not of a character which afforded bulls much satisfaction. It was chiefly professional. Bears at the opening had applied pressure upon Great Northern preferred because of the new issue of stock. It receded some, but the decline was of no great consequence. It did not demonstrated that it was not the weak spot in the list. It was freely bought on the decline. Fifty hour transactions did not total 50,000 shares, which indicated how narrow the market really was. Pennsylvania, which has been weakened by long-time rumors, recovered some of yesterday's loss in early trading. New York Central had more support. Regarding the list in general the demand was superior to pressure during the first hour. In the latter part of the forenoon the market weakened. Trading sentiment was in favor of lower rates. The decline in Chesapeake & Ohio in a measure was due to talk that its dividend rate has been increased, as yet no date range for paying off $25,000,000 due upon bonds in June. Metallic petroleum was a strong issue in the first hour.

NEW HAVEN WEAK.

New Haven continued to ease off, and nothing came from Washington during the morning regarding the conference between Chairman Elliott and Department of Justice officials, which, it was supposed, might affect the trend of the market. Early strength of the market was partly due to buying by interests where Americans grew stronger after opening irregular. Canadian Pacific had made a good gain over the other side.

By noon prices were irregular but the tendency was fairly firm. Fluctuations ruled small, but a few issues made substantial advances, including Amalgamated, Lehigh Valley, New York Central and Union Pacific. Steel was more than half a point higher, although reports from trade centres in regard to the demand for its products were not wholly encouraging. It appears that railroad and other interests have become more cautious buyers since the Interstate Commerce Commission suspended the freight rate advance by Eastern roads for five months, and great interest was felt in financial and railroad circles in the plan of conference in Washington that President Wilson had suggested to Chairman Clark of the commission. The speedy action on the petition as possible would be helpful to the country. This was construed as indicating that the President realizes how great a handicap to many lines of business uncertainty on this question has been. It has been pending nearly a year.

BUSINESS STILL QUIET.

Traders in stocks as a class appear to think that the promise of a great and general revival of commerce promised last month has not been realized and that it is little likely to be realized at once as ever. Although it is the consensus of opinion that the volume of trade must steadily increase, it is thought that the gain will be slow. The country is still far from recovery from "boom" times.

That the demand for goods in the United States has not materially increased is indicated from reports from abroad, where many manufacturers expected that under a lower tariff they would greatly enlarge sales on this side. A London statement reads:

"Great Britain's manufacturers are still waiting for the "boom" trade following America's new tariff schedules. Reports from the great linen districts in Ireland, notably Belfast, say that a depression has fallen on the trade, to failure of the expected American boom. Advices received from Belfast show that linen manufacturers in Belfast placed their factories on short time, and the same has occurred in the Lurgan and Portadown district.

WEAK ISSUES HERE.

There was not much movement to stocks as a class in the Boston market during the morning, but a few were weak. Boston & Maine was off 1½ at 48 in the second hour and New Haven was also considerably lower. Coppers were inactive as a class, frankly being contemptuous at one time for its decline. It dropped 1½ to 85, but by noon had recovered nearly all of its loss. Boston & Maine by midday was selling at 48½.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The London copper warrants market was dull today and at noon spot was unchanged and futures to 3d lower. At the close spot was off 2s 6d, and futures had declined 1½s/ much more.

It is said that orders for steel products are now being received in less volume than during the first week of this month, which is discouraging to manufacturers. Railroad buying slackened as soon as it became known that the Interstate Commerce Commission would be a longer time in rendering a freight rate decision than was expected.

BOSTON AMERICAN

30 AND 32 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, FEBRUARY 18, 1914.

The Two American Continents Need a First-Class INTERNATIONAL POLICE

The Whole World Will Have It Some Day, a Police Travelling in Flying Machines, Rather Than on Horseback. That Police Will Stop Wars.

How long are the various smaller nations scattered OUT on this continent and the continent of South America TO CONTINUE GOVERNMENT BY MURDER?

How long are the colored gentlemen in Hayti to take turns cutting each other's throats and shooting each other?

How long are the Mexicans to continue their career of revolution, murder and atrocity?

What goes on now among the smaller nations was customary formerly among individual human beings.

Only a few years ago, one man who disliked the other settled his quarrel with a knife.

Even the law said, when two men had a quarrel, "fight it out," and they invented what they called "the judgment of God."

The one who was victorious with the knife or the sword was declared to have Justice on his side. The assumption being that God, of course, would see that Justice won.

After awhile, murders in the streets by individuals were forbidden. And men became sufficiently intelligent to realize that the Ruler of the Universe does not come down to settle fights with knives and swords. And the private brawl, and that form of superstition called "the judgment of God," was done away with.

PAID POLICEMEN ATTENDED TO ALL FIGHTS.

Each nation calling itself civilized has its police force. The force is peaceful, as long as it CAN be peaceful. It is paid TO KEEP THE PEACE, not to fight.

Its business is to separate men that are fighting, lock them up and permit impartial judges to decide the right and the wrong.

The nations need a police force such as individuals have long had.

The nations should combine, as individuals in a city combine, in paying an efficient police CAPABLE OF COMPELLING ALL TO KEEP THE PEACE, powerful to compel the fighters to appear before international impartial courts and receive judgment.

We ought to have such a police on the two American continents—North and South—and Uncle Sam, who is the oldest, most peaceful AND MOST POWERFUL, should be Chief of Police. This would be a force paid for by all of the nations—by assessment in proportion to what its size might be. And that force, with its warships, should forbid colored high jinks in Hayti, half black and half white atrocities in Mexico, and stupid throat splitting generally throughout America.

That same police force, going for this entire planet what the police do for an individual city ought to be maintained by all of the nations, and nations, like individuals, should be forbidden the exciting pastime of cutting each other's throats, settling quarrels with cannons and bloodshed.

There is no doubt that we will see such a police some day—and it ought to be soon.

In the years that are to come a force of that kind will travel NOT BY HORSES, LIKE THE MOUNTED CONSTABULARY, OR IN IRON SHIPS, LIKE THE INTERNATIONAL FIGHTING FORCES OF TODAY, BUT IN AIRSHIPS, AND WITH THE SPEED OF THE SUN, IN ITS APPARENT JOURNEY AROUND OUR GLOBE.

The beginning of a fight in the back alley now is the signal for the blowing of a whistle and the hurrying of policemen to stop the fight.

When the nations shall have organized their squads of police, maintained by all for the peace of all, the beginning of a fight in a back alley nation like Mexico will be a signal to the force that demands peace and the fighting will be stopped.

When the flying police of the civilized globe does appear war will not live long.

The Country Wants the Truth Concerning Those New York "Vivisection" Charges

We hope the exact facts as to the inoculation of children in the tuberculin and luetin tests by scientists of the Rockefeller Institute will be ascertained by men competent to judge the facts. No layman is. There are extreme vivisectionists just as there are extreme anti-vivisectionists.

But certificates have been submitted to the New York American from practising physicians who say that they have been called upon to treat children for diseases with which the children were not afflicted, in the opinion of the doctors, before they were experimented upon.

The doctors are extremely loth to have their names used, first, because it is contrary to medical ethics, and, second, because they do not wish to attack animal vivisection, in which most of them believe.

The AMERICAN thinks in these circumstances that it is necessary to make public the charges in order to ascertain the truth.

As for Dr. Flexner, head of the Rockefeller Institute, his services to science and humanity, his important discoveries of the causes of infantile paralysis and spinal meningitis, put his scientific knowledge, his competence and his motive above question. It is conceivable, of course, that the purest scientific zeal may lead to methods in themselves unjustifiable.

It is a very serious matter, involving the lives and health of children who are intrusted to the hospital authorities of New York city, and the Hearst newspapers in New York propose to have the full facts, whatever they are, brought to light. If these facts are agreeable to the Rockefeller Institute or advantageous to the Rockefeller Institute they will be published gladly.

If they are damaging, they will be brought to light just the same.

HOW BILL GOT ALONG---No. 1

Bill lived just outside one of the small towns of New England. His father owned a fair-sized farm and, while not wealthy as we count wealth in the cities, was of average means. Bill had been raised on the farm and—hated it. Bill's father realized the possibilities of the new farming methods and wanted Bill to go to the agricultural school and learn them, so he could take hold of the farm and make it pay, as they had a really good market close by. But not for Bill, he had seen pictures of the great cities and had heard men talk about them who had been there. The thing that decided him finally was the return from Boston of a boy that formerly went to school with Bill. This young man talked, looked and breathed Boston in his (as he thought) very nifty, swagger clothes, and was very tolerant of all his old acquaintances, including Bill, telling them how foolish they were to be wasting their time in this "hick town"—as he put it—when they could really LIVE in a place like Boston; and how easy it was to get along there.

That night Bill lay awake for a long, long time, figuring it all out, in his comfortable, little, warm room, with not a sound outside but the crickets chirping and an occasional whip-poor-will. But what did Bill care for peaceful noises like those. He had heard them all his life and was used to them. What he longed for was the clang of bells and the hustle and bustle of a great city. So the next morning at breakfast Bill told his mother that he had decided to go to Boston and get a job.

(Bill's Adventures Will Be Continued on This Page.)

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XXXI.

It was after seven o'clock when Harry Sommerby's drove up to the gloomy house that Caryl and Julia Marvin called home, and helped his companion to alight. He held her hand closely in telling her goodbye.

"You look devilishly pretty," he said as the two stood at the side of the car. "For almost nothing I'd kiss you good-night."

Caryl laughed carelessly. "Perhaps I wouldn't let you if you tried," she said. "And anyway it's too light yet for even you to dare." Pulling her hand free of his grasp, she ran up the steps into the house.

Before driving away, the man jolted down the number of the house. Then he smiled cynically and climbed back into his car. "Little fool!" he muttered to himself for the second time within an hour.

Slowly Caryl mounted the steep stairs to her room. The house was close and stuffy, and there was a smell of cooking in the halls. The girl sniffed disdainfully.

"Oh, how I hate it all!" she murmured as she reached the floor on which was the room occupied by Julia and herself. She was in a distinctly bad humor as she entered the dingy chamber. Julia was lying on her bed, and in a chair by the window was the ample form of Mrs. Halloran.

"Well, I do declare!" exclaimed this latter personage as Caryl appeared, but Julia checked any further outburst.

"Mrs. Halloran," she said beseechingly, getting up from the bed, "would you mind leaving me and my sister alone for a little while now? Thank you for all you have done. I am very grateful."

The portly landlady arose and left the room, but as she passed Caryl she gave a scornful look, of which Caryl herself pretended to be entirely unconscious. Walking to the bureau she took off her veil and had removed her hat and gloves before she spoke to her sister.

"What's the matter, Judy?" she asked indifferently. "Got another of your headaches?"

"Where have you been?" queried the older girl gravely, ignoring the question asked her.

At the serious tone and manner Caryl looked dismayed, and a sudden guilty fear kept her silent.

"Where have you been, Caryl?" Julia repeated slowly.

With a gesture of impatience the younger girl threw off the nervousness that had seized her for the moment. "Oh, for mercy's sake," she snapped peevishly, "don't take on that severe manner with me. You know where I have been as well as I do. You got the note I left here—didn't you? You surely aren't angry about my going and taking tea at Mr. Delaine's—are you?"

"Don't tell me any more lies, please, Caryl," the sister begged wearily. "I want to know where you have been."

"I was at Mr. Delaine's," retorted the other hotly. "How many times do I have to tell you so?"

"You were not at Mr. Delaine's," Julia affirmed. "Mr. Delaine was not at home this afternoon. I saw him on the street. Furthermore, I know you did not lunch with him yesterday, and that he did not ask you to do so. You wrote me a lie today. Now tell me where you have been."

Caryl turned angrily upon her sister, her cheeks flaming, her eyes flashing. "It's none of your business!" she shrilled. "You aren't my mother. I won't tell you where I was! It's none of your affair!"

For a moment the two girls stood looking at each other. Caryl's face was flushed and stubborn. Julia was pale, but a gleam of temper was beginning to show in her dark eyes. All at once, as though to end the discussion, Caryl turned back to the bureau and began arranging her hair.

"Caryl," said Julia, still firmly, "you will either tell me, here and now, with whom you were today, and where you went, or I'll find out for myself."

"Much chance you'll have to find out!" scoffed Caryl, without looking around.

Taking a quick step forward, Julia laid her hands on Caryl's shoulders and turned the girl toward the light. As she did so, she started violently for the unmistakable odor of whiskey reached her nostrils.

"Caryl!" she ejaculated.

"Now what's the matter?" the younger girl queried irritably, twitching herself from her sister's grasp.

"There's the smell of whiskey on your breath," Julia accused in an awed whisper. "You've been—been—DRINKING!" Then, in a frenzy of anxiety, she grasped the girl again by the shoulders.

"Will you tell me where you have been?" she insisted, almost fiercely, while her lips trembled and her eyes flashed.

"Let me go!" Caryl ordered.

"I won't let you go," Julia declared between her set teeth—"not until you tell me where you have been."

"Good heavens!" cried Caryl, "what an infernal and intolerable bunger you are, Julia! I've been for an automobile ride, if you must know. There's nothing sinful in that is there?"

"Then why did you lie to me?" faltered the older girl, shaken by anger and fear. "With whom did you go?"

There was a moment of obstinate silence. Caryl stood with her face flushed and her eyes sullenly downcast. Julia, white as a ghost, her fingers interlocked in a painful grip, gazed at the girl who was her all as if by her very fear and yearning she could draw her secret from her. But the look did not move the younger sister from her determination.

"I'm not going to tell you," she said after a while.

Again she turned away, but her companion detained her while she spoke slowly and solemnly.

"Caryl," she said, "you will either tell me the whole truth or I—I—I'll go straight to Mr. Delaine and find out all he knows about this matter. He, at least, will not lie to me."

The First Real Thinker

By REV. T. B. GREGORY

Pythagoras, of Samos, who may well be called the first real thinker, died 2411 years ago.

For many years Pythagoras was the high priest of one of the most illustrious societies of antiquity; was looked upon as being little less than a god; while his influence was such that the greatest of the earth were willing to make any sacrifices that were necessary in order to become members of his cult.

Pythagoras was the first to use the word "Philosopher." He was not, he declared, a Sophist (wise man), but a philosopher (lover of wisdom). He was the founder of the noble science of mathematics. The Descartes of the ancient time, he created geometry, which he made to be the basis of his teaching. He is said to have discovered the great truth in music, that chances of sound are indissolubly connected with and dependent upon the changes in length and tension. He was the originator of the word "Cosmos" (order or harmony) as applied to the system of Nature. The first to teach the idea of natural law, he declared that the universe is a beautiful harmony, with law assisting law, and all working together to produce Cosmos—that is, beauty and perfection rather than chance and confusion. Hence his celebrated teaching of the "Music of the Spheres." He did not mean that the suns and planets made an actual music which could be heard by the outer ear, but that in the contemplation of the Cosmos and its laws is to be found the intellectual harmony and delight which may well be likened to sweetest music.

Questions Answered

H. L. M.—You are right in maintaining that Frederick the Great was a Free Mason. He joined the order in May, 1738, very much against the wishes of his father, Frederick William, who it seems had no love for the craft. When Frederick William died, in May, 1740, Frederick celebrated his freedom by holding a great Masonic meeting. The young King appears to have taken great interest in the order, and the stimulus given Freemasonry by the great sovereign and soldier is still felt by the order throughout the Germanic countries.

H. R.—The best history of England for one who desires to get a good all-around view of what England means, and is, and how she got to be what she is, is undoubtedly Green's "History of the English People." Green's book has well been called the "Flesh and Blood" history. If you want real facts, stated in an interesting and logical manner, so that you shall have not only the facts but the explanation of them, you cannot do better than to go to Green. The best history of France is Thomas E. Watson's. A good work on geology is Le Comte's "Elements of Geology."

How Mother Made Bread, and Now

By EDWIN MARKHAM

Dr. Scott Nearing, of the University of Pennsylvania, always has an illuminating view of the problems of the hour. In his "Social Sanity" he gives this vignette of the different ways of preparing our daily bread today and yesterday:

"As late as 1860, in a now prosperous section of New York State, the farmer's boy rose with the dawn, hitched a team of oxen to a wagon loaded with sacks of wheat and started for the mill. All of that day he travelled, and in the late afternoon reached a town in which there was a mill. The next day the miller, a long, pale man, poured this wheat into his hopper, taking as his toll one bag in every four; and the farmer's boy, loading the flour into his wagon, made ready for an early start the next day.

"By nightfall he was at home again with his wheat transformed into flour. Then his mother, mixing her own yeast and potato water, kneaded and set her bread over night, and in the morning the boy built a hot fire in the old stone oven, heated the stones well, raked out the fire and put the bread in its place to be baked.

"How different the process today! The wheat, carried in a freight car from Dakota to Minneapolis, is converted into flour and shipped by rail to Buffalo. There it goes to a baker, is tested, and turned into a machine which automatically measures the proper quantities of the various ingredients, mixes them, kneads them, divides them into loaves, and delivers them to the oven.

"In one day this child of human ingenuity makes fifty thousand loaves of bread. It is tended by five boys who merely watch the machine to see that all goes right. The reaper, the thresher, the elevator, the railroad, the mill—all of these, and all of the thousands of tools and appliances which make them possible—are the product of half a century. During the progress of an ordinary life, the whole world of industry has been transformed through the process of industrial evolution.

A Letter of Thanks from the Treasurer of the Commonwealth

To the Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I have been so exceedingly busy in matters connected with the popular sale of Massachusetts bonds that this is the very first opportunity I have had to thank you for the assistance which you have given me. When I determined to reject the bids of the syndicates and to sell these bonds to the people I did so with my eyes wide open and I knew very well the forces that I would have to fight. The editorial which you were kind enough to print on February 13 was not only highly gratifying to me, but it was a very clear and forcible statement of the great principles involved. The argument directed against the innovation seemed to be devoted to a discussion of the money profits to be derived from a popular sale of bonds as compared to the financial return if sold to a syndicate, but your paper really sensed the great principle involved.

Whether the State gains or loses a few hundreds or a few thousands of dollars is of little consequence compared to the great civic advantages that will inure to the people and to the Commonwealth. All governments in all countries of the world have been held too far aloof from the people. This has been true for centuries in the Old Country and for decades in our country, and the trend of the times is towards popularizing all governments. The Republican party was blasted in this Commonwealth by the short-sighted policy of a coterie of men who attempted to keep the government entirely separated from the rank and file of the people, and endeavored to select the officeholders many years in advance.

Selling State bonds by popular subscription is a practical way of demonstrating to the people that they really are a part of this government, and brings them into close and immediate relations with the machinery of the State and increases their patriotism. This is the really big lesson that may be learned by a study of this popular sale of bonds, and beside it all other petty questions of financial profit sink into insignificance. We are endeavoring to demonstrate that this government is indeed a government of the people and that it is not merely a mysterious and obscure mechanism beyond their reach and understanding.

If we could place a State bond in the hands of every enemy of government in this Commonwealth we would soon convert him because then he would realize by tangible evidence that he was a stockholder in the State. Your forceful editorial brought out all these points distinctly and helped me very materially to sell the bonds. A large proportion of the small bidders who have come to my office and filed applications for bonds have stated that they had read the Boston AMERICAN'S editorial. While I think this is a matter in which every newspaper should assist, yet I am deeply sensible of the invaluable aid which your paper rendered, and I am grateful. Sincerely yours,

FREDERICK W. MANSFIELD.
